NEW QUESTION # 153

In Huawei's SD-WAN solution, which of the following functions can "remotely diagnose branch equipment faults without the need for on-site maintenance personnel intervention"?

- A. Only device alarms can be viewed; remote diagnostics are not possible.
- B. Disable remote access to the device and allow only local diagnostics.
- C. On-site maintenance personnel need to connect the equipment for diagnosis.
- D. Perform diagnostics by remotely logging into the device's command-line interface (such as SSH).

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 154

(When a network device sends a registration request to iMaster NCE-Campus, which of the following is the destination port number?)

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: D

Explanation:

In the Huawei CloudCampus Solution, device registration is a key step that allows network devices such as switches, routers, and APs to establish a trusted management relationship with iMaster NCE-Campus. When a device is powered on and configured for cloud or controller-based management, it sends a registration request to the controller using a predefined service port.

According to HCIP Datacom Campus Network documentation, port 18008 is used as the destination port for device registration requests sent to iMaster NCE-Campus. This port is specifically reserved for device onboarding and registration services, ensuring secure and standardized communication during the initial connection phase. Once the registration is successful, the controller can authenticate the device, assign it to a site, and push management and service configurations.

The other options are not correct in this context. Port 53 is used for DNS services and has no role in controller registration. Port 179 is used by BGP for routing protocol communication and is unrelated to device management. Port 10020 is commonly associated with other management or telemetry functions but is not used for device registration in CloudCampus solutions.

Correctly configuring network connectivity and firewall rules to allow traffic to destination port 18008 is essential for successful zero-touch provisioning and automatic onboarding of devices. Therefore, the correct destination port number for device registration requests to iMaster NCE-Campus is 18008, making option D the correct answer.

- C. Routes between different VRFs are not interconnected by default, thus achieving isolation.
- D. VRF can be bound to the physical interface or sub-interface of the PE device.
