NEW QUESTION # 30

You have trained a machine learning model and are deploying it into production in a cloud-based environment. You need to ensure the model is continuously monitored for performance, including drift in input data and prediction quality.

Which of the following techniques should you use to effectively monitor the model in production? (Select two)

- A. Use manual inspection of model predictions periodically to assess accuracy in production.
- B. Implement model versioning and rollback procedures to maintain consistency in production models.
- C. Set up continuous model retraining pipelines triggered by data drift or performance degradation.
- D. Restrict access to the model's API to minimize the number of calls and reduce monitoring overhead.

Answer: B,C

NEW QUESTION # 31

You are working with a GPU-based cloud environment and need to optimize the memory usage for a dataset that contains a column `item_id` representing unique product IDs. The `item_id` values are large integers, and there are over 10 million distinct product IDs. Which of the following is the most memory-efficient data type choice for this column?

- A. `df['item_id'] = df['item_id'].astype('float64')`
- B. `df['item_id'] = df['item_id'].astype('int64')`
- C. `df['item_id'] = df['item_id'].astype('string')`
- D. `df['item_id'] = df['item_id'].astype('int32')`

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 32

You are processing a large dataset using NVIDIA Dask-cuDF to distribute GPU-accelerated computation across multiple nodes. Users report inconsistent execution times, with some jobs taking significantly longer than expected. Which of the following actions would best help diagnose the performance bottleneck?

- A. Use Dask's dashboard and NVTX markers to analyze task execution times and GPU utilization.
- B. Reduce the number of Dask workers to minimize parallel execution overhead.
- C. Limit GPU memory usage to force more frequent spilling to disk and observe performance differences.
- D. Switch to using Pandas with Dask to compare execution speed differences.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 33

You are designing a reproducible benchmark to compare the performance of deep learning models across frameworks like PyTorch and TensorFlow using NVIDIA's A100 GPU. Which step is most critical in ensuring fair benchmarking conditions?

- A. Enabling XLA compiler optimizations only for TensorFlow to enhance its performance.
- B. Measuring only forward pass latency to compare inference speed while ignoring backward pass computation.
- C. Using a different precision setting for each framework to maximize performance per framework's capabilities.
- D. Ensuring the same CUDA/cuDNN and driver versions are installed when running benchmarks across frameworks.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 34

A research team is analyzing large-scale social interactions and wants to identify strongly connected communities within a massive graph dataset using NVIDIA's cuGraph library. Which method would be the most efficient for this task?

- A. Use cuGraph's Louvain method to detect hierarchical communities based on modularity optimization.
- B. Apply cuGraph's Dijkstra's algorithm to find the shortest paths between all nodes and group them into communities.
- C. Apply cuGraph's Label Propagation Algorithm (LPA) to divide the graph into communities without predefining the number of clusters.
- D. Run the cuGraph PageRank algorithm and classify nodes with high scores as community leaders.

Answer: A
