ASIS-PSP (Physical Security Professional) exam is a certification program designed to evaluate the knowledge, skills, and abilities of security professionals in the physical security field. Physical Security Professional Exam certification is offered by the American Society for Industrial Security (ASIS), the world's largest organization of security professionals. The ASIS-PSP Certification is recognized globally and is considered to be a benchmark of excellence in the security industry.

ASIS Physical Security Professional Exam Sample Questions (Q150-Q155):

NEW QUESTION # 150

When designing safety and security countermeasures for an aging building, a Physical Security Professional's FIRST priority is to determine existing considerations for:

- A. Intruder detection
- B. Access control
- C. Physical security
- D. Fire detection

Answer: C

Explanation:

When designing safety and security countermeasures for an existing (especially aging) facility, the first priority for a Physical Security Professional is to assess the current state of physical security. This includes evaluating doors, locks, windows, barriers, structural access points, and environmental design features.

Understanding what currently exists sets the foundation for integrating other systems like fire detection, access control, and intrusion detection.

Fire detection (A) is critical for life safety but not the first step in physical security design.

Access control (B) and intruder detection (D) are components of the overall physical security system and come after baseline evaluation.

NEW QUESTION # 151

When chief executive officers have authority delegated by the senior executive to whom they report and they are granted a part of authority of their line superior, this is known as:

- A. Control authority
- B. Dominance authority
- C. Staff authority
- D. Financial authority

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 152

The temperature at which a solid fuel will inflame without direct flame contact is known as:

- A. Ignition temperature
- B. Excess temperature
- C. None of the above
- D. Agitate temperature

Answer: A

Explanation:

Ignition temperature (also known as autoignition temperature) is the minimum temperature at which a material will ignite spontaneously without an external flame or spark. Each material has a unique ignition temperature, which is a critical factor in fire safety and prevention.

Excess temperature (A) and Agitate temperature (C) are not standard fire science terms.

"None of the above" (D) is incorrect since ignition temperature is the valid term.

NEW QUESTION # 153

In _____, air has been reduced or fuel is dwindling to the point where there is no visible flame, just an entire area filled with tremendous heat.

- A. Last stage

- B. Ignition stage
- C. Smoldering burning
- D. Incipient stage

Answer: C

Explanation:

Smoldering burning is the final phase of a fire where visible flames are no longer present, but extreme heat persists. This occurs when the available fuel is nearly consumed, or oxygen is limited, creating a high- temperature environment without active flames. It poses a serious re-ignition risk.

Ignition stage (B) is the beginning of the fire.

Last stage (C) is too vague.

Incipient stage (D) refers to the early development before flames appear.

NEW QUESTION # 154

Which sensor should a security professional select for a confined interior area that will contain explosive vapors and materials?

- A. Passive infrared sensor
- B. Capacitance sensor
- C. Ultrasonic sensor
- D. Passive vibration sensor

Answer: A

Explanation:

For confined interior areas containing explosive vapors or materials, non-emitting sensors are preferred to avoid ignition risk. Passive Infrared (PIR) sensors are ideal in such environments because they detect heat signatures (infrared energy) emitted by intruders without emitting any signals or energy that could trigger an explosion.

A (Ultrasonic) and C (Capacitance) sensors emit signals.

D (Passive vibration sensors) detect vibration and are used in a different context, like surface tampering.
