NEW QUESTION # 202

Which description of an IdP server is true?

- A. consists of pieces of security information that are transferred to the service provider for user authentication
- B. authenticates user credentials
- C. is an authentication request that is generated by a Cisco Unified Communications application
- D. provides user authorization

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

SSO uses Security Assertion Markup Language (SAML) to exchange authentication details between an Identity Provider (IdP) and a service provider. The identity provider authenticates user credentials and issues SAML assertions, which are pieces of security information transferred from the identity provider to the service provider for user authentication. Each assertion is an XML document that contains trusted statements about a subject including, for example, username and privileges. SAML assertions are usually digitally signed to ensure their authenticity.
