dbt Labs dbt Analytics Engineering Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q325-Q330):

NEW QUESTION # 325

You've added detailed descriptions to your sources.yml file. Which of the following scenarios would still necessitate adding descriptions directly within your model files?

- A. If the source table undergoes a schema change, and you want to document these changes historically within the model.
- B. If different models utilize the same source table for different purposes.
- C. If you want to provide additional context or logic specific to how a source is used within that model.
- D. You always need both source and model-level descriptions for complete documentation.

Answer: A,B,C

Explanation:

A: Model descriptions allow for tailored explanations on how a source table is specifically used within the context of the model. B:

Maintaining historical context of changes directly within the model can be valuable for traceability. C: Differing model use cases can warrant distinct descriptions for the same source table.

NEW QUESTION # 326

You suspect discrepancies in a critical model. To troubleshoot, you need to understand the order of model execution, but the DAG is complex. What would be the BEST strategy to get this information?

- A. Run dbt docs generate and inspect the generated documentation.
- B. Visually inspect the manifest.json file.
- C. Use dbt ls -select
- D. Manually trace the dependencies in your model files.

Answer: A

Explanation:

While other options provide some information, dbt docs generate creates comprehensive documentation including a visual DAG to show execution flow clearly.

NEW QUESTION # 327

dbt Model Snippet:SQL

- A. The source() function retrieving data from the incorrect schema.
- B. The GROUP BY month clause leading to duplicate rows.
- C. The SUM(order_amount) aggregation logic.
- D. Incorrect Jinja usage within a macro used for templating

Answer: C

Explanation:

Focus on the calculation itself, as the rest of the structure seems expected. The source reference and grouping appear standard.

NEW QUESTION # 328

You need a very niche data transformation that no existing packages address. When should you consider building your own dbt package?

- A. If the transformation logic is complex and likely to be valuable to others in the dbt community.
- B. Whenever you need to encapsulate custom SQL logic for reuse across models.
- C. When strict versioning and control of the functionality are critical for your project
- D. Only after you have extensively searched for potential alternative solutions.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The primary benefit of creating a custom package lies in sharing it with others. If it's solely for your project, macros or well-structured models might suffice

NEW QUESTION # 329

You're reviewing a pull request and notice a subtle logic error that wasn't caught in automated tests. How do you best approach this within the code review?

- A. Leave a comment explaining the error and provide a suggestion for how to fix it.
- B. Reject the pull request outright and ask the author to fix the error and resubmit.
- C. Simply fix the error directly in the pull request without leaving a comment.
- D. Create a separate issue in the issue tracker, detail the bug, and reference it in the pull request.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Providing constructive feedback guides the PR author toward a solution, facilitating improvement and knowledge sharing.
