- A. Open
- B. None
- C. Asynchronous
- D. Shared key

WEP (Wired Equivalent Privacy) uses shared keys for authentication and encryption, meaning all devices and the access point use the same key for communication.
Key Characteristics:
* Relies on pre-shared keys.
* Vulnerable to cryptographic attacks due to weak key management and reuse.
Why Not Other Options:
* B. Asynchronous: Not relevant in the context of WEP.
* C. Open: Refers to an authentication method with no encryption, not involving shared keys.
* D. None: Incorrect; WEP uses shared keys for authentication.

- C. Vendors uses their own laptop and logins with same admin credentials your security team uses
- D. Vendor uses a company supplied laptop and logins using two factor authentication with their own unique credentials

Answer: D

Best Practices for Vendor Access:
The EC-Council CISO framework emphasizes secure and controlled access for third-party vendors to reduce risks of unauthorized access, data breaches, or misuse.
Key Reasons for Option C:
* Company-Supplied Laptop: Ensures compliance with internal security policies and avoids risks associated with unmanaged devices.
* Two-Factor Authentication (2FA): Adds an essential layer of security to prevent unauthorized access.
* Unique Credentials: Ensures accountability and enables tracking of vendor activities, reducing shared credential risks.
Why Not Other Options:
* Option A: Shared credentials create accountability issues and pose security risks.
* Option B: While 2FA is used, shared credentials are still a risk.
* Option D: Vendor's own laptop introduces risks from unverified device configurations.
EC-Council CISO Emphasis:
This approach aligns with best practices in third-party risk management, ensuring vendor access is secure, traceable, and compliant.
