NEW QUESTION # 57
OceanStor Pacific supports only three types of protocols: file (NFS/CIFS), object (S3), and HDFS?

- A. FALSE
- B. TRUE

Answer: A

Explanation:
The statement is False because Huawei OceanStor Pacific is a multi-protocol storage system that supports more than just the three mentioned protocols. While File (NFS/CIFS), Object (S3), and HDFS are the core protocols for mass data access, the system also supports:
DPC (Distributed Parallel Client): A specialized parallel file system interface that supports standard POSIX and MPI-IO, enabling high-performance computing (HPC) clients to connect directly to multiple storage nodes for balanced I/O.
Block Storage: Certain configurations of OceanStor Pacific can provide block storage services, making it a truly unified distributed platform.
S3 Versioning and Advanced Object APIs: It supports native S3 semantics for object versioning and other advanced cloud-native features.
Because it supports high-performance parallel interfaces (POSIX/MPI-IO) via DPC in addition to the standard protocols, it is technically incorrect to say it supports only three types.
