NEW QUESTION # 162

An organization named Sam Morison Inc. decided to use cloud-based services to reduce the cost of maintenance. The organization identified various risks and threats associated with cloud service adoption and migrating business-critical data to thirdparty systems. Hence, the organization decided to deploy cloud-based security tools to prevent upcoming threats. Which of the following tools help the organization to secure the cloud resources and services?

- A. Nmap
- B. Burp Suite
- C. Wireshark
- D. Alert Logic

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 163

Which of the following digital evidence temporarily stored on a digital device that requires a constant power supply and is deleted if the power supply is interrupted?

- A. Swap file
- B. Event logs
- C. Slack space
- D. Process memory

Answer: D

Explanation:

Process memory, or volatile memory (RAM), is digital evidence that requires a constant power supply to retain data and is deleted or lost when the power supply is interrupted. It contains information about the system's ongoing processes and operations. This type of evidence can be crucial for forensic investigations as it may hold information about user actions, system events, and the state of applications and services at the time of an incident. Unlike swap files, event logs, and slack space, which can retain information without a constant power supply, process memory is inherently volatile and its contents are lost when a device is powered off or restarts.

References: The ECIH v3 certification program includes discussions on digital forensics and the importance of different types of digital evidence, including volatile and non-volatile memory, in the context of incident response and investigation.

NEW QUESTION # 165

Your company sells SaaS, and your company itself is hosted in the cloud (using it as a PaaS). In case of a malware incident in your customer's database, who is responsible for eradicating the malicious software?

- A. The PaaS provider
- B. The customer
- C. Your company
- D. Building management

Answer: C

Explanation:

In the scenario where your company sells Software as a Service (SaaS) and is hosted on the cloud using it as a Platform as a Service (PaaS), your company is responsible for eradicating malware in your customer's database. This is because, as the SaaS provider, your company manages the software and is responsible for its security and maintenance, including the databases that store customer data. While the PaaS provider is responsible for the underlying infrastructure, platform, and possibly some middleware security aspects, the application layer security, including data and application management, falls to the SaaS provider. Building management would not be involved in digital security matters, and while customers are responsible for their data, the actual software maintenance and security in a SaaS model are the provider's responsibility. References: Incident Handler (ECIH v3) certification materials often discuss cloud service models (IaaS, PaaS, SaaS) and their associated security responsibilities, highlighting the importance of understanding who is responsible for what in cloud environments.

NEW QUESTION # 166

Ross is an incident manager (IM) at an organization, and his team provides support to all users in the organization who are affected by threats or attacks. David, who is the organization's internal auditor, is also part of Ross's incident response team. Which of the following is David's responsibility?

- A. Configure information security controls.
- B. Perform the necessary action to block the network traffic from the suspected intruder.
- C. Identify and report security loopholes to the management for necessary action.
- D. Coordinate incident containment activities with the information security officer (ISO).

Answer: C

Explanation:

In the context of an incident response team, the role of an internal auditor like David includes identifying, evaluating, and reporting on information security risks and vulnerabilities within the organization. His responsibility is to ensure that the organization's security controls are effective and to identify any security loopholes that could be exploited by attackers. Once identified, he reports these vulnerabilities to management so that they can take the necessary actions to mitigate the risks. This role is critical in maintaining the organization's overall security posture and ensuring compliance with relevant laws, regulations, and policies.

References: Incident Handler (ECIH v3) courses and study guides cover the roles and responsibilities of incident response team members, highlighting the importance of internal auditors in identifying and addressing security vulnerabilities.
