NEW QUESTION # 31

Users in your organization have seen a high volume of customer invoices ending up in spam. A customer has provided the following message header for an email that was sent to spam (please see image above.) You need to prevent these emails from going to spam. What should you do?

- A. Enable DKIM signing to add a DKIM signature to all outgoing messages.
- B. Ask the customer to create an approved sender list.
- C. Update SPF records to include all IPs.
- D. Set the DMARC Percent Option to 100%.

Answer: C

Explanation:

A is not correct because a message from an approved sender can still be blocked by the sender's DMARC policy.

B is not correct because the message will still fail an SPF check.

C is correct because the message failed SPF check, and updating SPF records will allow invoices to pass SPF check.

D is not correct because a DKIM signature may prevent spoofing, but alone may not stop the message from being marked as spam.

NEW QUESTION # 32

Your organization is implementing a new customer support process that uses Gmail. You need to create a cost-effective solution that allows external customers to send support request emails to the customer support team.

The requests must be evenly distributed among the customer support agents. What should you do?

- A. Set up an inbox for the customer support team. Provide the login credentials to the customer support team.
- B. Create a Google Group, add the support agents to the group, and set the posting permissions to "Public."
- C. Create a Google Group, enable collaborative inbox settings, set posting permissions to "Anyone on the web", and add the customer support agents as group members.
- D. Use delegated access for a specific email address that represents the customer support group, and add the customer support team as delegates for that email address.

Answer: C

Explanation:

A Google Group with collaborative inbox settings allows you to evenly distribute support request emails among the team. By setting the posting permissions to "Anyone on the web," external customers can send emails directly to the group, and the emails will be distributed to the support agents as tasks. This is a cost-effective solution that also provides an organized way to manage and track customer support requests.
