問題 #87

The belief that one's own culture is superior to another is known as

- A. encapsulation.
- B. ethnocentrism.

- C. stigmatization.
- D. stereotyping.

答案： B

解題說明：

Cultural competence is a core component of interpersonal competencies in the CFRP framework. The belief that one's own culture is superior to others is defined as ethnocentrism, which hinders effective engagement with diverse families. The CFRP study guide states, "Ethnocentrism, the belief that one's own culture is superior, undermines cultural competence and effective family support." Stigmatization (option A) involves negative labeling, encapsulation (option C) refers to cultural isolation, and stereotyping (option D) involves generalized assumptions, none of which precisely describe cultural superiority.

* CFRP Study Guide (Section on Interpersonal Competencies): "Ethnocentrism is the belief that one's own culture is superior to others, posing a barrier to culturally competent practice in family support." References:

問題 #88

Transition-age youth are able to gain psychosocial protective factors as well as neurophysiological buffering through which of the following?

- A. Consistent relationships with caring individuals
- B. Connection to a peer network
- C. Involvement in the child protective system
- D. Caregiving for younger siblings

答案： A

解題說明：

In the CFRP framework, transition-age youth services focus on fostering protective factors to support mental health and resilience. Consistent relationships with caring individuals, such as mentors or supportive adults, provide psychosocial protective factors (e.g., emotional support) and neurophysiological buffering (e.g., reducing stress responses). The CFRP study guide states, "Transition-age youth gain psychosocial protective factors and neurophysiological buffering through consistent relationships with caring individuals, which mitigate stress and enhance resilience." Caregiving for siblings (option B) may build responsibility but is less directly linked to neurophysiological benefits. Involvement in child protective services (option C) is often a risk factor, not a protective one. Peer networks (option D) are supportive but less impactful than adult relationships.

* CFRP Study Guide (Section on Transition-Age Youth Services): "Consistent relationships with caring individuals provide transition-age youth with psychosocial protective factors and neurophysiological buffering, reducing stress and promoting resilience."

問題 #89

Which of the following interventions would be the MOST appropriate to help a family access needed services?

- A. Encourage the family to find support services on their own to foster independence.
- B. Provide the family with a prepared plan to ensure they receive the services they need.
- C. Enroll the family in services based on needs identified by the practitioner.
- D. Work with the family to identify barriers to service utilization.

答案： D

解題說明：

The Systems Competencies domain focuses on collaborating with families to navigate and access community resources effectively. The PRA CFRP Study Guide 2024-2025 emphasizes family-centered practice, where practitioners partner with families to identify barriers (e.g., transportation, stigma, or lack of information) and develop tailored solutions to access services. This approach empowers families and ensures services align with their needs.

Option B (Work with the family to identify barriers to service utilization) is correct. The PRA guidelines highlight that identifying barriers collaboratively respects family autonomy and builds trust. This intervention enables the practitioner to address specific obstacles, such as logistical issues or mistrust, ensuring sustainable access to services.

OptionA(Provide the family with a prepared plan to ensure they receive the services they need) is incorrect because a practitioner-imposed plan disregards family input, violating the PRA's family-centered principles.

OptionC(Enroll the family in services based on needs identified by the practitioner) is incorrect because unilateral enrollment bypasses family collaboration. The PRA Code of Ethics requires involving families in decision-making.

OptionD(Encourage the family to find support services on their own to foster independence) is incorrect because it places undue burden on the family, especially if barriers like lack of knowledge or resources exist.

The PRA framework emphasizes guided support over unsupported independence.

問題 #90

A transition-age youth has expressed interest in attending a vocational school but has not decided on a specific program. How can the practitioner begin to help him make an informed decision?

- A. Assess strengths, skills, abilities, and interests.
- B. Assist with researching programs.
- C. Evaluate symptoms, problems, and barriers.
- D. Role-play interview scenarios.

答案： A

解題說明：

Supporting transition-age youth in achieving their goals, such as pursuing vocational education, is a key focus of the CFRP framework under Transition-Age Youth Services. When a youth expresses interest in vocational school but is undecided, the practitioner's initial step is to assess the youth's strengths, skills, abilities, and interests to guide decision-making. The CFRP study guide notes that "assessing the strengths, skills, abilities, and interests of transition-age youth is the foundation for helping them make informed decisions about educational and vocational goals." This strengths-based assessment informs subsequent steps, such as researching programs (option C), which comes later in the process. Evaluating symptoms and barriers (option A) focuses on deficits rather than strengths, and role-playing interviews (option B) is premature without first understanding the youth's interests and abilities.

* CFRP Study Guide (Section on Transition-Age Youth Services): "To support transition-age youth in making informed decisions about vocational or educational goals, practitioners begin by assessing their strengths, skills, abilities, and interests to align opportunities with their unique profiles." ### 問題 #91

A practitioner would invite a sibling of a service recipient to participate in a session when doing so

- A. provides respite for the parents.
- B. augments treatment.
- C. extends treatment to family members.
- D. addresses conflict.

答案： B

解題說明：

In the CFRP framework, family involvement is a key strategy for facilitating recovery, as it promotes resilience and supports the recovery process of the service recipient. Inviting a sibling to participate in a session is appropriate when it augments the treatment of the primary service recipient, such as by enhancing family dynamics, providing peer support, or reinforcing therapeutic goals. The CFRP study guide states that

"including siblings in sessions can augment treatment by fostering family cohesion and supporting the recovery process of the child receiving services." Providing respite for parents (option A) is not the primary purpose of involving a sibling in a therapeutic session. Addressing conflict (option B) may be a secondary outcome but is not the primary reason unless specified. Extending treatment to family members (option C) is inaccurate, as the focus remains on the service recipient's treatment, not treating the sibling.

* CFRP Study Guide (Section on Strategies for Facilitating Recovery): "Involving siblings in sessions can augment treatment by strengthening family support systems and enhancing the recovery process for the child receiving services."
