CSI Canadian Securities Course Exam2 Sample Questions (Q122-Q127):

NEW QUESTION # 122

An emerging Canadian company is exploring the possibility of using hot water springs to produce clean energy for remote rural communities. The company has strong human resource capital and few assets, and raised $20,000 through the Capital Pool Company program. Which option is best for this company to continue maximizing public exposure and raising capital?

- A. Escrowing shares
- B. offering a greenshoe option
- C. Filing disclosure documents with SEDAR+.
- D. Crowdfunding

Answer: D

Explanation:

For an emerging company with limited assets and innovative goals, crowdfunding is an excellent option to maximize public exposure and raise capital. Crowdfunding involves soliciting small investments from a large number of people, typically through online platforms, making it ideal for startups or innovative ventures like the use of hot water springs for clean energy.

Other options:

* Escrowing shares: Typically used to restrict the sale of shares for a certain period, not for raising capital.

* Offering a greenshoe option: Applies to stabilizing stock prices in an IPO or follow-on offering, not raising initial capital.

* Filing disclosure documents with SEDAR+: Necessary for public companies but does not directly raise capital or increase exposure.

References:

* Volume 1, Chapter 12: Financing and Listing Securities, section on "Capital Raising Options" covers crowdfunding as a method for startups to raise funds.

NEW QUESTION # 123

A financial institution is selling their pooled mortgages to a Special Purpose Vehicle. What process are they engaging in?

- A. Credit spread arbitrage.

- B. Asset securitization.
- C. Share splitting.
- D. Merger strategy.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 124

What type of return is adjusted for inflation?

- A. Ex-ante
- B. Ex-post
- C. Nominal
- D. Real

Answer: D

Explanation:

The real rate of return refers to the return on an investment adjusted for the effects of inflation. Unlike nominal return, which reflects the raw return of an investment without considering inflation, the real return provides a clearer measure of an investment's actual purchasing power.

Formula for Real Rate of Return: The formula for calculating real rate of return is:

$$\text{Real Return} = \text{Nominal Return} - \text{Inflation Rate}$$

$$\text{Real Return} = \frac{\text{Nominal Return}}{\text{Inflation Rate}}$$
For example, if an investment generates a nominal return of 5% and inflation during the period is 2%, the real return would be 3% (5% - 2%).

- * A. Ex-ante: Refers to a forecasted return, not necessarily adjusted for inflation.
- * B. Nominal: Measures the raw return without accounting for inflation.
- * C. Ex-post: Refers to a return based on historical data, which can be nominal or real.
- * D. Real: The correct answer, as it specifically accounts for inflation to measure the actual growth in purchasing power.

Explanation of Options: References:

* CSC Volume 2, Chapter 15: Real Returns and the Effect of Inflation, which explains the difference between real and nominal rates of return and their application in investment analysis.

NEW QUESTION # 125

What is the difference between sinking funds and purchase funds concerning the redemption of bonds prior to maturity?

- A. Sinking funds can redeem bonds only if they trade below a stipulated price while purchase funds do not have such a requirement.
- B. Sinking funds involve the issuer determining when bonds are redeemed while purchase funds involve the investor determining when the bonds are redeemed.
- C. Sinking funds have mandated redemptions while purchase funds can redeem only upon certain market conditions.
- D. Sinking funds can redeem the bonds any time while purchase funds follow a prearranged schedule.

Answer: C

Explanation:

* Sinking funds require the issuer to redeem a specified portion of the bond issue at regular intervals. This ensures systematic debt reduction and is mandated regardless of market conditions.

* Purchase funds, however, allow the issuer to buy back bonds only if they are available in the market at or below a stipulated price, making redemption conditional on market conditions.

* B. Sinking funds can redeem bonds only if they trade below a stipulated price: This applies to purchase funds, not sinking funds.

* C. Sinking funds involve the issuer determining when bonds are redeemed while purchase funds involve the investor determining when the bonds are redeemed: Investors have no role in determining bond redemption under either method.

* D. Sinking funds can redeem the bonds any time while purchase funds follow a prearranged schedule:

Sinking funds follow a schedule, and purchase funds rely on market conditions.

Reference: CSC Volume 1, Chapter 6, "Bond Features - Sinking Funds and Purchase Funds" explains these mechanisms for bond redemption.

NEW QUESTION # 126

What is one advantage of implementing indexing investing style?

- A. Suitable for short-term investing.
- B. Simple for investors to understand.
- C. Offers opportunity to outperform the market at a low cost.
- D. Provides preferential tax treatment to distributions in the form of derive-based income.

Answer: B

Explanation:

* Indexing is an investment strategy that tracks a benchmark index and is simple for investors to understand. This ease of understanding is one of its primary advantages.

* Option A: Indexing does not provide preferential tax treatment for derivative-based income.

* Option C: While low-cost, indexing does not offer an opportunity to outperform the market-it aims to match the market's performance.

* Option D: Indexing is typically suited for long-term investing due to its emphasis on broad market exposure and passive management.
