NEW QUESTION # 453

When should the project baseline be updated in order to meet the purpose of the 'issues' practice?

- A. When the project manager receives a request for change
- B. When a business opportunity has been recognized
- C. When a request for change is recorded on the issue register
- D. When a change has been approved by the change authority

Answer: D

Explanation:

In PRINCE2, the project baseline should be updated when a change has been formally approved by the change authority. This is because the baseline represents the agreed standards and plan against which the project's performance is measured. Updating the baseline after the approval of changes ensures that the project documentation accurately reflects the current scope, timescales, and resource allocations, which are essential for tracking progress and managing by exception effectively.
