Relativity Certified Administrator Sample Questions (Q75-Q80):

NEW QUESTION # 75

What is the default production sort order?

- A. Artifact ID
- B. Family group
- C. Custodian
- D. Control number

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is A. Artifact ID. Relativity's official Production Sets documentation states that in the Sorting section of a production, if no custom sort criteria are selected, the default sort order is Artifact ID, which Relativity describes as the load order of the documents. This is the platform's documented default for productions.

This is an important administrative detail because production sort order affects how documents are sequenced when a production is generated. Relativity also notes that when you apply a custom sort order, family groups are not kept together automatically, so administrators need to design sort strategies carefully if they want a specific production sequence. But absent any special configuration, Relativity defaults to Artifact ID.

The other options are not the documented default. Family group may be relevant in review workflows, but not as the production default sort order. Control number is also not the starting sort value because control numbers may be assigned independently of the production sort configuration. Custodian is a common field for review and QC, but again not the production default. Therefore, the correct answer is A. Artifact ID.

NEW QUESTION # 76

The lead attorney is working in the Hot Documents list view. They add a filter to the Hot Documents view and can no longer see all of the email attachments in the document list. Why might this be?

- A. The Family Group relational view is no longer selected.
- B. The Document Extension field is not indexed.
- C. The Group Identifier field is not populated.
- D. The selected filter only applies to attachments that are marked Hot.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is A. The Family Group relational view is no longer selected. In Relativity, family relationships for emails and attachments are displayed through a relational view tied to the Group Identifier field. Relativity's documentation explains that family groups are shown in a document list when a view is configured to display those relationships, and that the Group Identifier is the field used to associate an email with its attachments. When a relational family view is active, users can see the family grouped together in the list rather than seeing only the individual records that directly meet the filter criteria.

Once the attorney adds a filter, the list may appear to "lose" attachments if the view is no longer leveraging the Family Group relational context. This is because Relativity filters act on the records in the active view, and related items such as attachments are included through family grouping behavior rather than because every attachment independently satisfies the filter. The Group Identifier field itself is generally what defines the family relationship, and if it were not populated, the issue would be broader and structural, not just something that appears after adding a filter. The Document Extension field being indexed is unrelated to whether attachments display as family members in the document list. Therefore, the most plausible and Relativity-aligned explanation is that the Family Group relational view is no longer selected, which prevents all related email attachments from continuing to display together in the filtered Hot Documents view.

NEW QUESTION # 77

What is the best way to convert an existing workspace in Relativity to a repository workspace?

- A. Move the files to an existing repository workspace using Integration Points.
- B. Update the status field on the workspace object to say "Repository".
- C. Install the Repository application to the workspace.
- D. ARM the workspace out, then restore it as a repository workspace.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is D. Install the Repository application to the workspace. Relativity's official repository workspace documentation states that when installed to an existing workspace, the RelativityOne repository workspace application converts the workspace into a streamlined repository workspace for early case assessment and lower-cost storage of data not actively under review. The documentation also provides a dedicated section called Converting a review workspace to a repository workspace , where the conversion steps are simply to access the RelativityOne Repository Workspace application from the Application Library and install the application to the desired workspace .

This makes option D the exact documented conversion method. Option A describes moving data to another repository workspace, which is a different workflow and does not convert the existing workspace itself.

Option B involving ARM restore is used in some repository-related workflows, especially around templates or archived workspaces, but it is not the primary documented method for converting an existing workspace.

Option C is incorrect because repository mode is not enabled by editing a status field. Relativity also notes that if you convert an existing review workspace by installing the Repository application, the workspace remains classified for billing as a review workspace until the beginning of the next calendar month, which further confirms that application installation is the actual conversion mechanism.

NEW QUESTION # 78

How can you ensure a video will be synced to a transcript?

- A. The video and text files must be uploaded separately and synced through a mass action.
- B. Import the video file as part of the larger .pst.
- C. Videos cannot be synced to a transcript.
- D. The video must be synced to one .MP4 video and uploaded at the same time.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The correct answer is C. The video must be synced to one .MP4 video and uploaded at the same time.

Relativity's official Transcripts application documentation explicitly states that the video can be played in the Viewer in sync with the text of the transcript, and further notes: you must import videos at the same time you are uploading transcripts or the video and transcript cannot sync . The documentation also describes uploading the video as an .mp4 alongside the transcript during the transcript upload workflow.

This directly eliminates the other options. Option A is false because Relativity clearly supports synced transcript video playback.

Option B is wrong because this is not a PST-based workflow. Option D is also incorrect because the documentation does not describe a later mass action that separately syncs already uploaded video and text files; instead, the sync relationship is established during the same upload process.

Relativity even distinguishes that videos are not stored as normal documents in the document list, but rather as a file field within a transcript, reinforcing that the transcript upload workflow is the correct path.

From a case administration standpoint, this is important because transcript/video synchronization affects deposition and interview review usability. To ensure successful synchronization, the transcript and its associated .mp4 video must be uploaded together.

Therefore, the correct answer is C .

NEW QUESTION # 79

How many files can you upload at one time using Simple File Upload?

- A. 1,000
- B. 0
- C. 1
- D. 2

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is C. 100 . According to Relativity's official Simple File Upload documentation, the SFUMaxFilesToUpload instance setting determines the maximum number of documents a user can upload at one time using Simple File Upload. Relativity states that administrators can configure this setting up to 100 files , and when the setting is at its maximum, users can upload up to 100 files at one time . If a user selects more than 100 files, Relativity uploads only the first 100 selected files and does not upload the remainder.

Relativity also indicates that a warning message appears in the upload window when more than 100 files are selected.

This makes the answer operationally important for administrators because Simple File Upload is designed for lightweight, direct document uploads within a workspace, not for large-scale ingestion jobs. For more substantial data loading exercises, administrators typically use Relativity's broader import workflows rather than relying on Simple File Upload. From an RCA perspective, knowing this limit helps with user support, upload troubleshooting, and setting expectations for workspace users who need to add small batches of documents quickly. Therefore, among the options given, 100 is the only choice that aligns with the official Relativity behavior for Simple File Upload.
