Answer: C,D

NEW QUESTION # 136

An incident in Cortex XSIAM contains the following series of alerts:

- * 10:24:17 AM - Informational Severity - XDR Analytics BIOC - Rare process execution in organization
- * 10:24:18 AM - Low Severity - XDR BIOC - Suspicious AMSI DLL load location
- * 10:24:20 AM - Medium Severity - XDR Agent - WildFire Malware
- * 11:57:04 AM - High Severity - Correlation - Suspicious admin account creation Which alert was responsible for the creation of the incident?

- A. Suspicious AMSI DLL load location
- B. Rare process execution in organization
- C. WildFire Malware
- D. Suspicious admin account creation

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is B - Rare process execution in organization.

In Cortex XSIAM, when an incident is created, the first alert generated within the incident's timeline is considered the initiating event or the trigger responsible for the creation of the incident. Based on the provided timestamps, the earliest alert generated was the "Rare process execution in organization", at 10:24:

17 AM. Subsequent alerts within the same causality chain or event flow would be added to this already-created incident.

Hence, the initiating alert is always the earliest alert chronologically within an incident's timeline.

"Incidents are created based on the earliest alert in the causality chain. Subsequent related alerts are grouped under the same incident." Document Reference: XSIAM Analyst ILT Lab Guide.pdf Exact Page: Page 32 (Incident Handling and Response Section)

NEW QUESTION # 137

An incident context tab shows:

- User = jsmith@corp
- Affected endpoints = 2
- Alerts = file modification, process injection

What can be concluded?

Response:

- A. The same user was involved across multiple assets
- B. This is likely an HR system error
- C. The incident links multiple alerts and assets to the same identity
- D. Alerts are isolated and unrelated

Answer: A,C

NEW QUESTION # 138

Which type of analytics will trigger the alert on the image shown?

- A. Baseline
- B. Anomaly
- C. Behavioral
- D. Contextual

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

The correct answer is D - Anomaly.

In Cortex XSIAM, Anomaly analytics are designed to trigger alerts when a monitored activity deviates significantly from the established baseline or historical average. In the image, the "Failed login by non-existent users on host" metric remains at zero for several days and then suddenly spikes to 267 and 381—far above the average threshold. This significant deviation from the established norm is identified by the analytics engine as an anomaly and will trigger an alert for further investigation.

"Anomaly analytics identify significant deviations from established baselines or averages, such as unusual spikes in failed login attempts or other behavioral outliers, and trigger alerts for potential threats."
