NEW QUESTION # 182

Which of the following is NOT a deciding factor in determining the extent of testing required?

- A. Budget to do testing
- B. Time available to do testing
- C. Level of risk of the product or features
- D. A particular tester involved in testing

Answer: D

Explanation:

The extent of testing required for a software product depends on various factors, such as the level of risk, the budget, and the time available. The level of risk reflects the potential impact of failures on the stakeholders and the environment. The budget determines how much resources can be allocated for testing. The time available defines the schedule and deadlines for testing activities. The particular tester involved in testing is not a deciding factor for the extent of testing required, as testing should be based on objective criteria and not on personal preferences or abilities. NEW QUESTION # 183

Who of the following has the best knowledge to decide what tests in a test project should be automated?

- A. The customer
- B. The development manager
- C. The developer
- D. The test leader

Answer: D

Explanation:

The test leader is the person who is responsible for planning, monitoring, and controlling the test activities and resources in a test project. The test leader should have the best knowledge of the test objectives, scope, risks, resources, schedule, and quality criteria. The test leader should also be aware of the test automation criteria, such as the execution frequency, the test support, the team education, the roles and responsibilities, and the devs and testers collaboration. Based on these factors, the test leader can decide which tests are suitable for automation and which are not, and prioritize them accordingly. The test leader can also coordinate with the test automation engineers, the developers, and the stakeholders to ensure the alignment of the test automation strategy with the test project goals and expectations. NEW QUESTION # 184

The following state diagram is given as basis for state transition testing and contains only valid transitions:

Explanation of the state diagram: States are depicted as nodes. The initial state is I, the final state is F. A state transition is depicted as a directed arrow with the initiating event as a label, e. g. from I to S1 with event a, and is also written as a triple (I,a,S1). Note: A test case is a sequence of events that initiates the corresponding sequence of state transitions.

The state diagram contains the following 7 state transitions:

- (I, a, S1)
- (S1, a, S2), (S1, b, S3), (S1, c, F)
- (S2, a, S3)
- (S3, a, S2), (S3, b, F)

What is the minimum number of test cases to achieve 100% coverage of all valid state transitions in the diagram?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

NEW QUESTION # 185

Which of the following statements about error guessing is true?

- A. Experienced testers, when applying error guessing technique, can anticipate where errors, defects and failures have occurred and target their tests at those issues
- B. Error guessing refers to the ability of a system or component to continue normal operation despite the presence of

- erroneous inputs
- C. Experienced testers, when applying error guessing, rely on the use of a high-level list of what needs to be tested as a guide to find defects
- D. Error guessing is a system that adopts artificial intelligence to predict whether software components are likely to contain defects or not

Answer: A

Explanation:

This answer is correct because error guessing is a test design technique where the experience and intuition of the tester are used to anticipate where errors, defects and failures have occurred or are likely to occur, and to design test cases to expose them. Error guessing can be based on factors such as the complexity of the system or component, the known or suspected weaknesses of the system or component, the previous history of defects, or the common types of errors in the domain or technology. Error guessing can be used as a complementary technique to other more systematic or formal techniques, or when there is insufficient information or time to apply them.
