CWNP Certified Wireless Design Professional Sample Questions (Q95-Q100):

NEW QUESTION # 95
In WLAN location-based services, which metric, despite being commonly used, offers the lowest accuracy when determining device positions?

- A. Angle of Arrival (AoA)
- B. Time of Arrival (ToA)
- C. Received Signal Strength Indicator (RSSI)
- D. Time Difference of Arrival (TDoA)

Answer: C

Explanation:
The Received Signal Strength Indicator (RSSI) is a measure of the power present in a received radio signal.
While it is commonly used in WLAN location-based services due to its simplicity and the fact that it doesn't require additional hardware, RSSI-based positioning is susceptible to environmental factors like multipath propagation and signal attenuation, leading to lower accuracy.
In contrast:
Angle of Arrival (AoA) determines the direction of the incoming signal, offering better accuracy.
Time of Arrival (ToA) measures the time it takes for a signal to travel from the transmitter to the receiver, providing precise distance measurements.
Time Difference of Arrival (TDoA) calculates the difference in arrival times between multiple receivers, enhancing location accuracy.

NEW QUESTION # 96
Main Topic:ProtocolandSpectrumAnalysis
Question:
How are EAP messages transported over 802.11 wireless LANs?

- A. EAP_TLS
- B. PEAP
- C. EAPOL
- D. EAP-Fast

Answer: C

Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation:
EAP (Extensible Authentication Protocol) messages are encapsulated withinEAP over LAN (EAPOL)frames when transmitted over 802.11 wireless networks. EAPOL operates at the data link layer and is part of the 802.1X standard, facilitating authentication between the client (supplicant) and the authentication server.
A:EAP-Fast is an EAP method, not the transport mechanism.
B:PEAP is another EAP method that encapsulates EAP within a TLS tunnel.
D:EAP-TLS is an EAP method utilizing TLS for authentication.

NEW QUESTION # 97
What single tool, by design can be used to verify channel selection, encryption in use and number of APs above a specified signal threshold in a given location during deployment?

- A. Spectrum analyzer
- B. WLAN scanner
- C. Spreadsheet
- D. Throughput tester

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 98

During your first pre-deployment meeting with the deployment team, you hand out the full design documentation to everyone. What is your primary goal during this meeting?

- A. To discuss AP functionality
- B. To justify the budget
- C. To explain how Wi-Fi works
- D. To explain design decisions and ensure understanding of design documents

Answer: D

Explanation:
The primary goal of the initial pre-deployment meeting is to ensure that the deployment team fully understands the design documentation, including the rationale behind design decisions. This understanding is crucial for accurate implementation and to address any potential issues proactively.

NEW QUESTION # 99

Which document outlines the objectives, scope, and key stakeholders, serving as the official authorization to begin a WLAN design and deployment project?

- A. Budget
- B. Bill of Materials
- C. Work Breakdown Structure
- D. Project Charter

Answer: D

Explanation:
The Project Charter is a foundational document in the WLAN design process. It formally authorizes the project, detailing the objectives, scope, key stakeholders, and providing the project manager with the authority to allocate resources and begin project activities. This document ensures that all parties have a clear understanding of the project's goals and boundaries from the outset.
In contrast:
The Bill of Materials (BoM) lists the hardware and software components required for the project but does not define the project's objectives or scope.
The Work Breakdown Structure (WBS) breaks down the project's deliverables into manageable sections but is developed after the project has been authorized.
The Budget outlines the financial resources allocated for the project but does not encompass the project's objectives or stakeholder information.
