ServiceNow Certified Implementation Specialist - Discovery Sample Questions (Q113-Q118):

NEW QUESTION # 113

_____ are global variables for steps in horizontal discovery patterns.
Response:

- A. Baseline and system
- B. Process and computer_system
- C. System and process
- D. Computer_system and baseline

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 114
In Discovery, which one of the following causes a pattern to fail during discovery?
Response:

- A. No pattern attached to a classification
- B. No parse variable operation used in a step
- C. No CI Identifier exists
- D. No firewalls installed on the host

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 115
A network device has both an SSH port and an SNMP port open. Discovery tries the SSH probe first and it fails. This triggers the SNMP probe, which succeeds. Discovery uses SNMP first for subsequent discoveries on that device.
What discovery functionality allows the above to happen?

- A. IP service affinity
- B. Credential affinity
- C. MID Server affinity
- D. Classification

Answer: B

Explanation:
Credential affinity is an association between a set of credentials and a device on your network. When Discovery or Orchestration first attempts to access a device, they try all available credentials until a valid one is found. Once a valid credential is found, it is recorded in the dscy_credentials_affinity table, and further discovery processes rely on this information. If the credentials are modified or changed, the process will be repeated until a valid credential is found and updated in the same table. Credential affinity allows Discovery to use the most efficient and successful credential for each device, and avoid unnecessary credential failures.
1: Credential affinity for Discovery and Orchestration, Credential Management in ServiceNow discovery
