- A. Lower WIP limits result in fewer Stories being completed
- B. Higher WIP limits result in lower utilization
- C. Lower WIP limits improve flow
- D. Higher WIP limits provide richer feedback

Answer: C

Explanation:
Lowering the work in process (WIP) limits improves the flow of value through the system by reducing the amount of work that is started but not finished, minimizing the waste of context switching and multitasking, and increasing the focus and collaboration of the teams. Lower WIP limits also help identify and eliminate bottlenecks, balance demand and capacity, and accelerate feedback and learning. According to the SAFe Principle #6, visualizing and limiting WIP is one of the key practices to achieve continuous flow and deliver value in the shortest sustainable lead time.
