AACN CCRN (Adult) - Direct Care Eligibility Pathway Sample Questions (Q404-Q409):

NEW QUESTION # 404
The nurse is caring for a patient who is vulnerable, unable to participate in decision-making and care, and has limited resource availability. In caring for this patient, which of the following competencies, as defined in the Synergy Model, would NOT be of primary focus for the nurse?

- A. Collaboration
- B. Systems thinking
- C. Advocacy and moral agency
- D. Response to diversity

Answer: D

Explanation:
The nurse in this situation would need to focus on advocacy and moral agency, collaboration, and systems thinking to best address the needs of the patient. Response to diversity would not play a major role in caring for this particular patient.

NEW QUESTION # 405
Intracranial aneurysms usually occur in the:

- A. circle of Willis
- B. aorta
- C. subarachnoid space
- D. pituitary gland

Answer: A

Explanation:
Subarachnoid Hemorrhage (SAH) can result from trauma, aneurysm, or other vascular malformations.
Intracranial aneurysms usually occur in the circle of Willis at arterial bifurcations or trifurcations.
Aneurysms vary in size and shape; saccular (berry) aneurysms are the most common and most amenable to treatment. When an intracranial aneurysm ruptures, blood is forcibly expelled into the subarachnoid space and coats the brain surfaces.
In addition to an aneurysm that can occur in important arteries such as those supplying blood to the brain (intracranial or cerebral aneurysm), they can also occur in the aorta, the main artery that carries oxygen-rich blood from the heart to the body.

NEW QUESTION # 406

In which of the following pressure injuries is osteomyelitis MOST LIKELY to occur?

- A. Stage 3 pressure injuries
- B. Pressure injuries do not increase the risk of osteomyelitis
- C. Stage 4 pressure injuries
- D. Deep tissue injury

Answer: C

Explanation:

Osteomyelitis is an infection of the bones, and is most likely to occur when bone is exposed. Stage 4 pressure injuries are the only type of pressure injuries in which bone may be exposed. Stage 3 pressure injuries cause full thickness tissue loss and may increase the risk of osteomyelitis, but not as much as stage 4 pressure injuries where the bone is actually exposed. Deep tissue injuries may extend down to the bone, but do not expose the bone to the external environment.

NEW QUESTION # 407

The critical nurse is creating a care plan for a patient who was admitted in septic shock. When formulating a care plan for this patient, which of the following approaches is BEST?

- A. The care plan should be focused and discipline-specific
- B. The care plan should collaboratively involve multiple disciplines
- C. The care plan must be approved by the unit's manager
- D. The care plan should be reviewed by multiple clinicians who are not involved in the patients care for an outside perspective

Answer: B

Explanation:

Care plans should be developed collaboratively with other disciplines to enhance the continuity of care and have multidisciplinary inputs that result in more comprehensive treatment. A good care plan should not be specific to one discipline. Having a care plan reviewed by multiple clinicians who are unfamiliar with the patient is unlikely to be helpful, although outside consultation may be indicated in some situations. The manager of a unit is not required to approve care plans.

NEW QUESTION # 408

Which of the following is the MOST LIKELY early symptom to occur with an aortic aneurysm?

- A. Tearing pain in the chest, back, or abdomen
- B. Dyspnea
- C. Tachycardia
- D. Early symptoms are not likely to occur with aortic aneurysms

Answer: D

Explanation:

Aortic aneurysms are normally asymptomatic in their early stages. Pain only occurs as an expanding aneurysm begins to create pressure on the internal tissues and nerves. Tachycardia and dyspnea are both late signs that occur when the aneurysm places pressure on blood vessels, airways, or begins to dissect or rupture.
