- D. If the product Inventory threshold that triggers the web service calls is reached too often. It will have a negative Impact on site performance.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:
The risks associated with the proposed real-time inventory update solution during flash sales are:
* Option A (The default rate limiter configuration for the web-service could cause the web-service to return an exception during high traffic): This is a critical risk because high traffic during flash sales could exceed the rate limits set for the web-service, leading to exceptions and potentially failing to update inventory in real-time.
* Option B (If the external hosted web-service is unreliable, it could be a point of failure in the site' s order placement flow): Reliance on an external web-service for crucial operations like inventory updates introduces a risk of downtime or performance issues if the service is unreliable, directly impacting the ability to complete orders during peak sales periods.
Both risks could severely disrupt operations during critical sales events, suggesting a need for robust contingency plans and potentially reevaluating the solution architecture to ensure reliability.

- D. Information logs should not be used in a production environment

Answer: A,C

Explanation:
In a production environment, logging sensitive customer information such as credit card details (PAN, CVV, expiration date) can lead to severe security and compliance issues, specifically violating PCI DSS (Payment Card Industry Data Security Standard) requirements. The standards strictly prohibit the storage of CVV codes and mandate that any PAN displayed must be masked. Storing such data in logs is not only a risk for data breaches but also non-compliance with these standards can lead to penalties.
* Option A: Including the customer's card name along with the full credit card number in logs is a clear violation of PCI DSS requirements, which stipulate that no more than the last four digits of the card number may be displayed.
