NEW QUESTION # 63

A team of CRM Analytics developers has been working on an existing recipe to add new derived fields. The edited version has been failing ever since, and management is requesting that the dashboard show refreshed data while they work on the edits. How can the developers add new fields while keeping the dataset refreshed?

- A. Clone the existing recipe to add fields and roll back the original recipe to the last working version.
- B. Refresh the dataset after working hours to avoid the edited version from failing.
- C. A recipe for the new fields and when that is successful, add it to the existing recipe as a join node.

Answer: A

Explanation:

When faced with the need to continue refreshing data while developing new features in a recipe, the best practice is:

* Clone the Existing Recipe: By cloning the recipe, developers can experiment with adding new fields and transformations without affecting the production data flow. This allows for testing and development in a sandbox-like environment.

* Roll Back to a Stable Version: Rolling back the original recipe to the last stable version ensures that the production dashboards continue to receive refreshed data, maintaining business operations without disruption. This approach not only ensures data continuity but also provides a safe environment to address any issues that may arise from new developments.

NEW QUESTION # 64

Cloud Kicks (CK) has a dashboard in CRM Analytics with forecasting data. One widget is a compare table using the timeseries function showing the quarterly forecast. However, CK is interested in enhancing the dashboard with a weekly forecast per customer. How should CK achieve this?

- A. An SAQL query with a timeseries statement specifying Opportunity Name as the partition and Y-M-W as the Date Cols
- B. An SAQL query with a timeseries statement specifying Account Name as the partition and Y-M-W as the Date Cols
- C. An SAQL query with @ timeseries statement specifying Account Name as the partition and Y-M-D as the Date Cols

Answer: B

Explanation:

To create a weekly forecast per customer, an SAQL (Salesforce Analytics Query Language) query can be used.

The timeseries function generates forecast data based on a specified date range. In this case, the forecast is customer-specific, meaning the partition should be based on Account Name to ensure that the forecast is generated for each customer. The date column (Date Cols) should be set to Y-M-W to aggregate the forecast data on a weekly basis.

NEW QUESTION # 65

Cloud Kicks needs a CRM Analytics consultant to install the Appointment Analytics App. After installation, they realize the wrong field was picked and the app did not have access to a newly created field that should be used instead of the old one.

What is the first step the consultant should take to prevent erroneous dataset/dashboard creation?

- A. Stop the recipe from running in Data Manager.
- B. Cancel running installations from Setup
- C. Update the app with the new field after installation.

Answer: A

Explanation:

If the wrong field is selected in the initial setup of an app or dataset, it is important to stop any data processing activities (like recipe executions) to prevent erroneous data from being loaded into datasets and dashboards. In this case, stopping the recipe from running in Data Manager is the correct first step. Once the recipe is stopped, the consultant can update the field selection or make other necessary corrections before restarting the process.
