質問 # 244

Anita, a Certified Fraud Examiner (CFE), is investigating a suspected collusion scheme among a group of contractors. While interviewing one of the suspect contractors, Anita asks, "How many years have you been working as a contractor in this city?" This can MOST ACCURATELY be described as a(n) question.

- A. Leading.
- B. Complex.
- C. Closed.
- D. Open.

正解: C

解説:

Anita's question is a closed question because it calls for a narrow, specific answer rather than a broad narrative. "How many years have you been working as a contractor in this city?" asks for a number or short factual response. Open questions invite broader explanations and are often useful when the examiner wants the respondent to provide a narrative. A leading question suggests the answer or assumes facts not yet established. A complex question combines multiple subjects or requires multiple answers. Anita's question is simple, factual, and limited in scope, so it is best classified as closed. Closed questions can be useful in interviews when the examiner needs precise background details or confirmation of specific facts.

質問 # 245

Which of the following statements is TRUE regarding the authentication of evidence in most common law systems?

- A. For evidence to be authenticated, it must be certified by the clerk of the court trying the case.
- B. Digital records can be authenticated by a witness who has personal knowledge.
- C. Unauthenticated exhibits are admissible at trial if they are offered as circumstantial evidence.
- D. The purpose of authentication is to show that the evidence submitted is relevant to the case.

正解: B

解説:

Authentication is the process of showing that evidence is what its proponent claims it to be. In common law evidence systems, digital records may be authenticated through testimony from a witness with personal knowledge, circumstantial evidence showing distinctive characteristics, or certified business- record procedures. A witness might authenticate digital records by explaining how the records were created, obtained, maintained, and preserved. Option A is incorrect because certification by a court clerk is not the universal requirement for authentication. Option C is wrong because unauthenticated exhibits are generally inadmissible regardless of whether they are direct or circumstantial evidence.

Option D confuses authentication with relevance; authentication concerns genuineness, not whether the evidence tends to prove a material issue.

質問 # 246

Suri is conducting a fraud examination in a country where courts apply laws from codified statutes to each case and their decisions are not bound by similar court decisions from previous cases. This type of judicial system is best known as a:

- A. Codified law system
- B. Common law system
- C. Civil law system
- D. Statutory law system

正解: C

解説:

The correct answer is D. Civil law system. A civil law system is generally characterized by reliance on codified statutes and written legal codes as the primary source of law. In these systems, courts apply legislative codes to the facts of each case, and judicial decisions from prior cases usually do not bind future courts in the same way that precedent operates in common law systems. This description matches the facts given in the question exactly.

Option B, the common law system, is incorrect because common law jurisdictions place much greater weight on judicial precedent, meaning earlier court decisions can be binding on later cases involving similar legal issues. Options A and C sound plausible, but they are not the standard legal-system labels used in comparative law. For CFE purposes, the recognized contrast is generally between civil law and common law systems.

Understanding this distinction is important in fraud examinations because legal procedure, evidentiary practices, court structure, and the investigator's interaction with attorneys and judges can differ significantly depending on the type of legal system involved. Since the question emphasizes codified law and the absence of binding precedent, civil law system is the most accurate answer.

- A. Identify the relevant data
- B. Build a profile of potential frauds.
- C. Cleanse and normalize the data.
- D. Monitor the data.

正解: A

解説:
