NEW QUESTION # 299

When developing a request for proposal (RFP), a specification that requires bidders to satisfy overall system effectiveness measure is referred to as:

- A. Feature-based
- B. Performance-based
- C. Cost-based
- D. Results-based

Answer: B

Explanation:

A performance-based specification defines what the system must achieve (e.g., detection rate, response time), without specifying how to achieve it. This allows vendors flexibility in choosing technologies that meet required outcomes.

* B (Feature-based) and C (Results-based) are loosely defined or incorrect terms in procurement standards.

* D (Cost-based) focuses on budget, not system performance.

What is the term for a situation in which a series of small, undocumented changes result in a cumulative, significant impact on a project?

- A. Cost overrun
- B. Project drift
- C. Scope creep
- D. Incremental change

Answer: C

Explanation:

Scope creep refers to the uncontrolled expansion of a project's scope without corresponding adjustments to time, cost, or resources. It occurs when small, undocumented changes accumulate, leading to a significant shift from the original objectives. In physical security projects, this may result in unanticipated costs, resource drains, or compromised system designs.

Cost overrun (A) is a result of scope creep but not the cause.

Incremental change (B) refers to planned, manageable changes.

Project drift (C) is a loosely defined term and less specific than scope creep.
