- A. More than acquiring the purchased software package by US $1,550.
- B. More than acquiring the purchased software package by US $3,550.
- C. Less than acquiring the purchased software package by US $3,500.
- D. Less than acquiring the purchased software package by US $500.

Answer: C

Computer charges are transfer prices and do not require additional expenditures, given idle capacity. The relevant cost of supplies is US $300 $500 -$200 cost if the software are is purchased). The contractor's use of an otherwise idle office is not relevant. Thus, the relevant cost of development is US $25,500 [[1 .000 hours x $22 hourly cost of the contractor) * $3,200 hardware purchases * $300 incremental cost of supplies]. This amount is US $3,500 less than the US $29,000 cost of purchase. A systems analyst's work on the new software is not relevant. It is part of the regular workload.
