The Main Topics of the Exam

In this test, questions will be derived from six major modules that include related sub-topics. Here are the areas that the candidates can expect to face in 300-620:

- ACI anywhere

  This is the last major topic you will be assessed on and it takes about 10% of the entire exam. Here, the candidates will be asked to describe multipod and multisite.

- External Connectivity of Networks

  In this domain, one should show the knowledge of the procedures such as Layer 2 out and Layer 3 out. These involve familiarity with the core concepts of STP/MCP and other related topics. The module covers 20% of the test.

- Packet Forwarding in ACI

  This domain covers 15% of the exam syllabus. It includes the concepts such as endpoint learning and the implementation of bridge domain configuration. This the knowledge of processes like unicast routing, ARP flooding, etc.

- The management of ACI

  This section also takes about 20% of the exam content. Here, the candidates should demonstrate their knowledge of the implementation of in-band as well as out-of-band, skills in using SNMP services and Syslog, and applying the configuration backup, including a snapshot or config import and export. An understanding of the RBAC and AAA implementation as well as the principles of upgrade and configuration are required too.

- The ACI integrations

  15% of the questions are expected to be delivered from this topic. The applicants will be asked how to perform the implementation of the VMware vCenter DVS integration and what is the resolution immediacy when it comes to VMM. Finally, the candidates should be able to implement a managed as well as an unmanaged service graph.
