Which configuration is most likely missing?

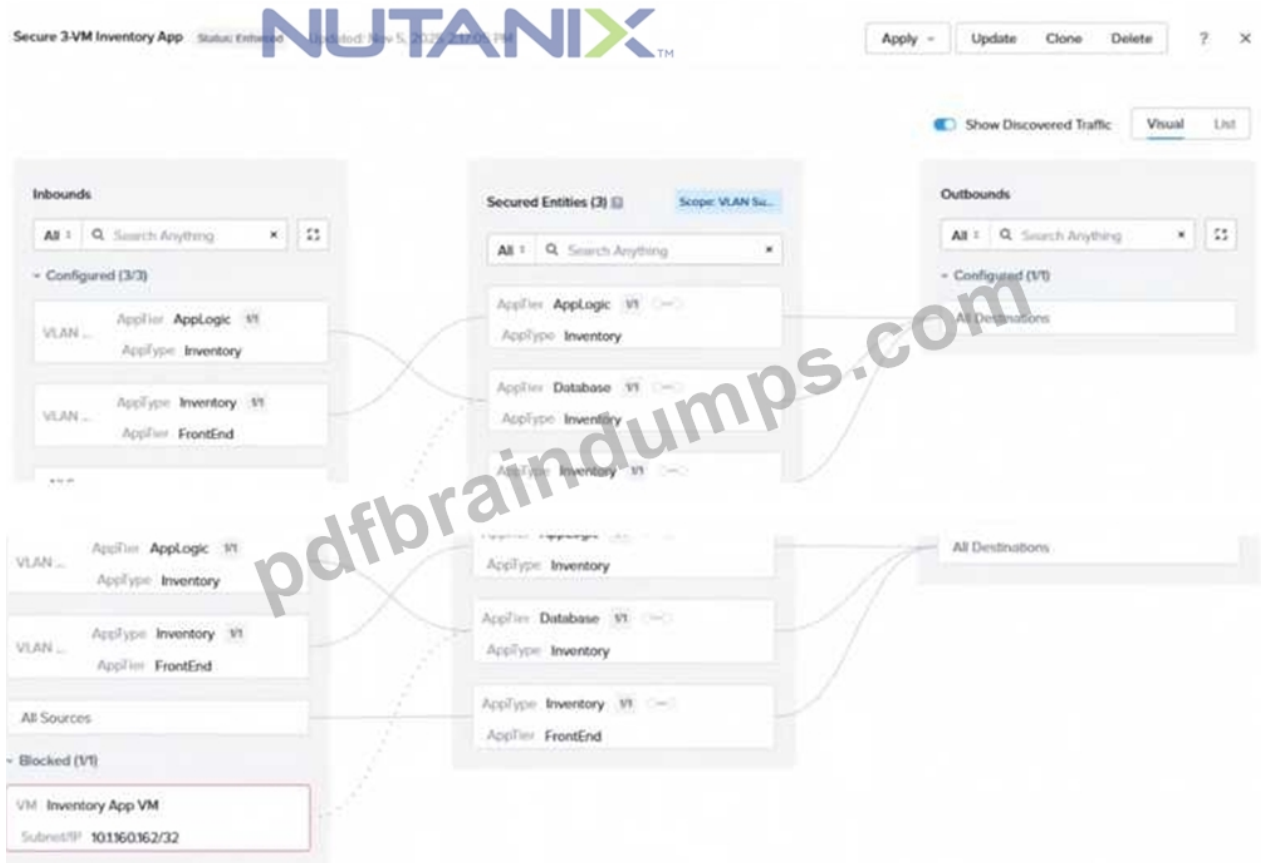

- A. ASN configuration for the local gateway to identify its autonomous system

- B. DHCP options for assigning IP addresses to remote endpoints.
- C. VLAN ID alignment between local and remote networks.
- D. Peer IP address required for establishing the BGP session.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 56

Refer to the exhibit.

An administrator is reviewing an enforced security policy "Secure 3-VM Inventory App", as shown in the exhibit. Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 57

An enterprise has deployed a VPC called FinanceVPC using Nutanix Flow Virtual Networking. The Finance team needs the following connectivity:

Internal servers in the VPC must reach an on-premises corporate data-center via a point-to-point encrypted link.

Some servers in the VPC must also access the public internet with source NAT and receive inbound access via floating IPs.

The corporate network uses overlapping IP space with other VPCs in the environment, so address translation is necessary for those workloads.

The networking design must support routing via BGP for future site expansions and provide low-latency north-south connectivity.

Which actions should the administrator take to satisfy this requirement?

- A. Use a No-NAT External Network for the on-premises link and a NAT External Network for Internet access. Configure a VPN tunnel to the on-premises location and enable BGP on the VPC router for the on-premises link.

- B. Use two No-NAT External Networks-one for the on-prem link and one for Internet access; configure static routes for both without NAT.
- C. Use a single No-NAT External Network for both on-prem and Internet access; configure BGP and direct routing out to the internet without NAT.
- D. Use a single NAT External Network for both the on-prem link and Internet access; configure a default route to the external network and enable SNAT and floating IPs for all traffic.

Answer: A
