NEW QUESTION # 56

Huawei IVS platform can connect to cameras of a vendor only after the required access plug-in is installed on the platform.

- A. TRUE
- B. FALSE

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Huawei Intelligent Video Surveillance (IVS) platform is designed with a high degree of openness and compatibility, allowing it to manage a vast array of front-end devices from various third-party vendors. To facilitate this interoperability, the platform utilizes a specialized driver or plug-in architecture. While standard protocols like ONVIF, GB/T 28181, and SDKs provide a baseline for communication, many proprietary features and vendor-specific protocols require a dedicated access plug-in to be installed on the platform side.

These plug-ins act as a translation layer that maps the third-party camera's private commands and data structures to the IVS platform's unified internal management language. This is particularly important for synchronization functions and interconnection collection, which are often handled by the VDS (Video Data Service) component. By installing the correct vendor-specific plug-in, the platform can access advanced camera features such as PTZ control, alarm reporting, and parameter configuration that might not be fully supported by generic standards. This modular approach allows Huawei's intelligent vision system to remain flexible and future-proof, enabling rapid integration of new camera models and vendors without requiring a full system-wide firmware upgrade.
