- B. In the absence of contrary contractual language network float, as opposed to project float, there is a shared commodity between the owner and contractor
- C. In the absence of a contrary contractual language total float, as opposed to free float, there is a commodity belonging to the contractor
- D. In the absence of contrary contractual language free float, as opposed to project float, there is not a shared commodity between the owner and the contractor

Answer: B

Explanation:

* Understanding Float:

Network Float: The shared amount of time that non-critical activities can be delayed without affecting the project completion date. Float ownership is not exclusive unless explicitly stated in the contract.

* Evaluation of Options:

Option B: Incorrect. Total float does not belong solely to the contractor unless stated.

Option C: Incorrect. Total float is not exclusively owned by the owner unless stated in the contract.

Option D: Incorrect. Free float is tied to specific activities and not shared.

Option A: Correct. In the absence of specific contract terms, network float is generally shared.

NEW QUESTION # 78

An earned value-based project control system can use either of which two budgets as the basis of its calculations?

- A. Earned or budgeted cost yearly.
- B. Direct or indirect cost.
- C. Labor hours or dollars.
- D. Linear feet or dollars.

Answer: C

Explanation:

An earned value management (EVM) system can base its calculations on labor hours or monetary values, depending on the nature of the project. Both methods are valid for tracking performance and forecasting outcomes.

Option B (direct or indirect cost) does not align with EVM's focus on performance metrics.

Option C confuses timeframes with budgeting principles.

This is consistent with EVM principles as outlined in project control methodologies within the PSP materials.
