NEW QUESTION # 149

Which of the following is MOST likely to use a CDN?

- A. Document management system
- B. Email service provider
- C. Realty listing website
- D. Video streaming service

Answer: D

Explanation:
A CDN (content delivery network) is a network of distributed servers that store and deliver content to users based on their geographic location and network conditions. A CDN can improve the performance, availability, scalability, and security of web-based applications and services by reducing the latency, bandwidth, and load on the origin server. A CDN is most likely to be used by a video streaming service, which typically involves large amounts of data, high demand, and diverse audiences. A video streaming service can benefit from using a CDN by caching and streaming the video content from the nearest or best-performing server to the user, thus enhancing the user experience and reducing the cost and complexity of the service.

A realty listing website is a web-based application that allows users to search, view, and compare properties for sale or rent. A realty listing website may use a CDN to improve the performance and availability of the website, especially if it has a large number of images, videos, or other media files. However, a realty listing website is not as likely to use a CDN as a video streaming service, since the content is not as dynamic, the demand is not as high, and the audience is not as diverse.

An email service provider is a company that offers email hosting, management, and delivery services to users. An email service provider may use a CDN to improve the security and reliability of the email service, especially if it has a large number of users, messages, or attachments. However, an email service provider is not as likely to use a CDN as a video streaming service, since the content is not as public, the performance is not as critical, and the location is not as relevant.

A document management system is a software application that allows users to create, store, organize, and share documents. A document management system may use a CDN to improve the scalability and accessibility of the document storage and retrieval, especially if it has a large number of documents, users, or collaborators. However, a document management system is not as likely to use a CDN as a video streaming service, since the content is not as large, the demand is not as variable, and the audience is not as global.
