NEW QUESTION # 764

All of the other alternatives apply. Which of the following statements is true regarding constraints and assumptions?

- A. Constraints restrict the actions of the project team, and assumptions are considered true for planning purposes.
 - B. Constraints consider vendor availability and resource availability to be true for planning purposes. Assumptions limit the project team to work within predefined budgets or timelines.
 - C. Constraints and assumptions are inputs to the Initiation process. They should be documented, because they will be used throughout the project Planning process.
 - D. Constraints are considered true for planning purposes, and assumptions limit the options of the project team.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Constraints limit the options of the project team by restricting action or dictating action. Scope, time, and cost are the three most common constraints, and each of these has an effect on quality. Assumptions are presumed to be true for planning purposes. Always validate your assumptions.
