NEW QUESTION # 65

Which component is required when performing an Unstructured Data Backup?

- A. Backup proxy
- B. Mount proxy
- C. Guest interaction proxy
- D. Offline proxy

Answer: A

Explanation:

When configuring an Unstructured Data Backup (often referred to as "NAS backup" or "file share backup") in Veeam, you must add and configure a File Backup Proxy role in your environment. In the Veeam UI and documentation, this role is typically grouped under the broader concept of a Backup Proxy - it's just configured specifically for file-level (unstructured data) processing rather than VM image-level backups.

Backup Proxy (File Backup Proxy role)

Responsible for reading data from file shares or NAS devices and then sending it to the backup repository.

You can deploy it on a Windows or Linux server with access to the file share.

Which option should the engineer choose to achieve this goal?

- A. Find a Service Provider with Offsite Backup services, create a Backup Copy job with Immediate Copy (Mirroring) mode to the Service Provider repository
- B. [Add the repository to a Scale-Out Backup repository, extend it with a Public Cloud Object Storage as Capacity tier in copy mode
- C. Add the repository to a Scale-Out Backup repository, extend it with a Public Cloud Object Storage as Capacity tier in copy and move mode, and set the operational restore window to 7 days
- D. Configure a Hardened Linux Repository, create a Backup Copy job with Periodic Copy (Pruning) mode to this repository and schedule it to run once a day

Answer: D

Explanation:

To achieve the goal of creating a secondary copy of the backups that is transferred only once a day, the engineer should configure a Hardened Linux Repository and create a Backup Copy job with Periodic Copy (Pruning) mode to this repository, scheduling it to run once a day. This setup respects the bandwidth and compute limitations while ensuring a daily copy of the backups.
