Cisco Performing CyberOps Using Cisco Security Technologies Sample Questions (Q120-Q125):

NEW QUESTION # 120
An engineer notices that unauthorized software was installed on the network and discovers that it was installed by a dormant user account. The engineer suspects an escalation of privilege attack and responds to the incident. Drag and drop the activities from the left into the order for the response on the right.

Answer:

Explanation:

NEW QUESTION # 121

Refer to the exhibit.

Where is the MIME type that should be followed indicated?

- A. x-test-debug
- B. strict-transport-security
- C. x-xss-protection
- D. x-content-type-options

Answer: D

Explanation:

The MIME type that should be followed is indicated by the x-content-type-options header in HTTP responses.
This header is used to instruct the browser not to attempt MIME type sniffing, but to stick with the MIME type declared by the server. This can help prevent security risks associated with incorrect MIME type interpretation, such as executing non-executable MIME types as if they were scripts12.

* The Performing CyberOps Using Cisco Security Technologies (CBRCOR) course guides learners through cybersecurity operations fundamentals, including how to interpret security event logs and understand access control policies1.
* The Cisco Certified CyberOps Associate certification provides knowledge on monitoring, detecting, and responding to cybersecurity threats, which includes understanding the significance of access control rules in network traffic management2.

NEW QUESTION # 122
An engineer detects an intrusion event inside an organization's network and becomes aware that files that contain personal data have been accessed. Which action must be taken to contain this attack?

- A. Disconnect the affected server from the network.
- B. Analyze the source.
- C. Access the affected server to confirm compromised files are encrypted.
- D. Determine the attack surface.

Answer: A

Explanation:

When an intrusion event is detected and personal data has been accessed, the immediate action to contain the attack is to disconnect the affected server from the network. This prevents the attacker from accessing more resources or causing further damage and allows the organization to begin the process of investigating and eradicating the threat
