Microsoft Implementing Data Engineering Solutions Using Microsoft Fabric Sample Questions (Q63-Q68):

NEW QUESTION # 63
You have a Fabric deployment pipeline that uses three workspaces named Dev, Test, and Prod.
You need to deploy an eventhouse as part of the deployment process.
What should you use to add the eventhouse to the deployment process?

- A. a deployment pipeline
- B. an Azure DevOps pipeline
- C. GitHub Actions

Answer: A

Explanation:
A deployment pipeline in Fabric is designed to automate the process of deploying assets (such as reports, datasets, eventhouses, and other objects) between environments like Dev, Test, and Prod. Since you need to deploy an eventhouse as part of the deployment process, a deployment pipeline is the appropriate tool to move this asset through the different stages of your environment.

NEW QUESTION # 64
You have a Fabric workspace named Workspace1 that contains a warehouse named DW1 and a data pipeline named Pipeline1.
You plan to add a user named User3 to Workspace1.
You need to ensure that User3 can perform the following actions:

Update the tables in DW1.
The solution must follow the principle of least privilege.
You already assigned the appropriate object-level permissions to DW1.
Which workspace role should you assign to User3?

- A. Viewer
- B. Contributor
- C. Admin
- D. Member

Answer: B

Explanation:
To ensure User3 can view all items in Workspace1 and update the tables in DW1, the most appropriate workspace role to assign is the Contributor role. This role allows User3 to:
View all items in Workspace1: The Contributor role provides the ability to view all objects within the workspace, such as data pipelines, warehouses, and other resources.
Update the tables in DW1: The Contributor role allows User3 to modify or update resources within the workspace, including the tables in DW1, assuming that appropriate object-level permissions are set for the warehouse.
This role adheres to the principle of least privilege, as it provides the necessary permissions without granting broader administrative rights.
