DAMA MD-1220 (Meta Data) Certification Exam is a professional qualification designed for those who want to validate their understanding of metadata management principles and practices. DAMA International, the Data Management Association, is the organization behind the exam. It is a global non-profit professional association of data management professionals who are dedicated to promoting the understanding and practice of data management as a critical business function.

DAMA MD-1220 (Meta Data) Certification Exam is specifically designed to test a candidate's knowledge and skills in the area of metadata management. Metadata is critical for effective data management, as it provides information about the data that is being stored, such as its origin, format, and structure. This information is used to ensure that data is accurately stored, tracked, and utilized in accordance with organizational needs. Meta Data certification exam is based on the DAMA International Data Management Body of Knowledge (DMBOK), which is a comprehensive guide to best practices in data management.
