3. A patient with osteoporosis has been advised to increase the amount of calcium in her diet. Which food provides the most calcium? An 8- oz glass of milk An ounce of cheddar cheese A half cup of raw broccoli A 4- ounce salmon croquette	Answer A is correct. An 8-ounce glass of milk contains 290mg of calcium. Answers B, C, and D contain lesser amounts; therefore, they are incorrect. (Note: An ounce of cheddar cheese contains 205 mg of calcium; half a cup of raw broccoli contains 175mg of calcium; and 4 ounces of salmon croquette contains 165 mg of calcium).
4. Which of the following instructions should be included for the patient taking calcium supplements? A.The patient should take her calcium with meals B.The patient should take all her daily calcium supplements at one time C.The patient should take her calcium supplement after meals to prevent stomach upset D.The patient can use calcium-based antacids for supplement.	Rationale: Answer D is correct. Many people prefer to supplement their calcium intake with calcium-based antacids. If calcium supplements are used, they should be administered 30 minutes before meals to maximize absorption, so answer A is wrong. Calcium absorption is better if it is administered throughout the day rather than in a single dose, making answer B wrong. Calcium supplements do not cause stomach upset, so answer C is wrong.
