- A. A CDB-level resource plan can limit PDB CPU utilization.
- B. A CDB-level resource plan can limit PDB UNDO use.
- C. A PDB-level resource plan can limit session PGA memory.

- E. A CDB-level resource plan can limit session CPU utilization.
- F. A CDB-level resource plan is mandatory when using PDB-level resource plans.

Answer: A,C,D

Explanation:

AB correct - no doubts

D is correct instead of C, because - on the PDB level you manage resources more/less the same as in non-CDB database hence you can limit uncommitted UNDO per consumer group:

while from CDB level you cannot limit CPU on particular session level in PDB (it can be done on PDB level) but you can "only" limit CPU generally for particular PDB:
