Course Offering is an EDA object that indicates a class is available for a given term. Course Offering is an object that represents a specific instance of a course that is offered during a term. Course Offering can be used to track various information about a class, such as name, code, capacity, faculty, location, or schedule. The consultant can create a Course Offering record for each class that is available for a given term and associate it with the Term object. Course Connection, Attendance Event, and Time Block are not EDA objects that indicate a class is available for a given term. References:

NEW QUESTION # 116

A large online university uses Salesforce with the Education Data Architecture (EDA) to manage its operations. Its Salesforce environment has a large volume of records and it takes a long time to search and generate list views.

Which feature should the consultant use to resolve the issue?

- A. Custom Index
- B. MuleSoft Anypoint Platform
- C. Data Loader error logs
- D. Table-Driven Trigger Management

Answer: A

Explanation:

The consultant should use a custom index to resolve the issue of taking a long time to search and generate list views for the large online university's Salesforce environment that has a large volume of records and uses EDA. A custom index is a feature that allows users to create an index on a field that is not indexed by default, such as a custom field, a long text area field, or a multi-select picklist field. A custom index can help improve the performance and speed of queries and list views that use the indexed field as a filter. The consultant should identify the fields that are frequently used in searches and list views, and request Salesforce Support to create a custom index on them. MuleSoft Anypoint Platform, Data Loader error logs, and Table-Driven Trigger Management are not features that can resolve the issue of taking a long time to search and generate list views for the large online university's Salesforce environment that has a large volume of records and uses EDA. - B. Projects focus on replacing paid solutions.
- C. Projects go through a Salesforce Security review.
- D. Projects allow only a few participants.

Answer: C
