Psychiatric Rehabilitation Association Certified Psychiatric Rehabilitation Practitioner Sample Questions (Q11-Q16):

NEW QUESTION # 11

An individual with a psychiatric disability has been taking a psychotropic medication that has been effective in reducing the intensity of psychotic symptoms but has caused weight gain and high cholesterol. The individual expresses concern to his practitioner regarding his newly developed medical conditions but feels they are unavoidable. The practitioner's BEST response would be to

- A. assist the individual in choosing between having a stable mental health status or a good physical health status.
- B. remind the individual that he is not alone in dealing with declining physical health and inform him of the prevalence of the issue.
- C. express support of the individual's feelings about his medical conditions, but emphasize the positive changes in his mental health.
- D. provide education on metabolic syndrome and discuss how to talk about his concerns with his primary physician and psychiatrist.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Supporting holistic health, particularly when addressing side effects of psychotropic medications, is a critical competency in psychiatric rehabilitation. The CPRP Exam Blueprint (Domain VII: Supporting Health & Wellness) emphasizes educating individuals about health conditions and facilitating communication with healthcare providers (Task VII.A.2: "Provide education on health conditions and treatment options"). Option A (provide education on metabolic syndrome and discuss how to talk about his concerns with his primary physician and psychiatrist) aligns with this task by empowering the individual with knowledge about metabolic syndrome—a common side effect of antipsychotics characterized by weight gain, high cholesterol, and increased diabetes risk—and supporting collaborative care with medical professionals to explore management options (e.g., lifestyle changes or medication adjustments).

Option B (choosing between mental and physical health) is inappropriate, as it presents a false dichotomy and contradicts recovery-oriented principles that integrate both mental and physical health (Domain V). Option C (emphasizing mental health over physical concerns) dismisses the individual's valid concerns, violating person-centered care principles (Domain I). Option D (highlighting prevalence) normalizes the issue but fails to provide actionable steps, unlike Option A. The PRA Study Guide underscores the importance of holistic health education and advocacy, reinforcing Option A.

NEW QUESTION # 12

The concept of "continuity of care" in community treatment describes ensuring that:

- A. Appropriate levels of services are provided.
- B. Transportation to various services is provided.
- C. The various service elements are linked.
- D. The services needed actually exist.

Answer: C

Explanation:

This question pertains to Domain VI: Systems Competencies, which focuses on navigating and coordinating mental health systems to support recovery. The CPRP Exam Blueprint defines continuity of care as "ensuring that services are coordinated and linked to provide seamless support across different providers and settings." Continuity of care is a key principle in community-based psychiatric rehabilitation, ensuring that individuals experience integrated, cohesive support as they move through various services.

* Option B: Ensuring that "the various service elements are linked" directly reflects the definition of continuity of care, which involves coordinating services (e.g., mental health treatment, housing, employment support) to create a seamless care experience. This includes communication between providers, shared treatment plans, and transitions between services, aligning with PRA's systems-level approach.

* Option A: Ensuring services exist is related to resource availability but does not address the coordination or linkage of services, which is central to continuity of care.

* Option C: Providing appropriate levels of services relates to service intensity or appropriateness but does not capture the linkage or coordination aspect of continuity.

* Option D: Providing transportation is a logistical support that may facilitate access but is not the core definition of continuity of care, which focuses on service integration.

Extract from CPRP Exam Blueprint (Domain VI: Systems Competencies):

"Tasks include: 1. Coordinating services across multiple providers and systems to ensure continuity of care. 2.

Facilitating transitions between different service settings to support recovery."

NEW QUESTION # 13

A 30-year-old individual has been living with his parents for six years. Previously he worked part-time at various jobs. He quit the jobs because the work was too physically demanding. His parents have told him that he must get a job or they will not continue to support him. What is the FIRST BEST step for the practitioner to take?

- A. Assess the individual's strengths and weaknesses
- B. Assess the local labor market for opportunities
- C. Assist the individual to determine his capacity and goals
- D. Identify potential resources for employment and job hunting

Answer: C

Explanation:

The individual faces family pressure to secure employment due to past job challenges, indicating a need to align his aspirations with feasible goals. The CPRP Exam Blueprint (Domain IV: Assessment, Planning, and Outcomes) emphasizes that the first step in person-centered planning is to assist the individual in identifying their capacity (e.g., abilities, limitations) and goals to ensure rehabilitation efforts are meaningful and tailored (Task IV.A.1: "Conduct functional assessments to identify individual goals and strengths"). Option D (assist the individual to determine his capacity and goals) aligns with this, as understanding his physical limitations, interests, and employment aspirations (e.g., less physically demanding roles) provides the foundation for subsequent steps like job matching or resource identification.

Option A (assess the labor market) is premature without knowing the individual's goals. Option B (assess strengths and weaknesses) is part of a functional assessment but follows goal identification to ensure relevance. Option C (identify resources) assumes employment as the goal without confirming the individual's preferences. The PRA Study Guide highlights goal-setting as the initial step in addressing employment challenges, supporting Option D.

NEW QUESTION # 14

A trauma-informed perspective views trauma-related symptoms and behaviors as

- A. the individual's maladaptive response to the experiences.
- B. culturally specific responses to cope with the experience.
- C. environmentally specific responses to the experiences resulting in maladaptive behaviors.
- D. a response reflecting the individual's best attempt to cope with the experiences.

Answer: D

Explanation:

A trauma-informed perspective reframes trauma-related symptoms and behaviors as adaptive coping mechanisms rather than deficits, recognizing them as the individual's best effort to survive overwhelming experiences. The CPRP Exam Blueprint (Domain I: Interpersonal Competencies) emphasizes understanding trauma responses as coping attempts to inform person-centered, empathetic care (Task I.A.4: "Apply trauma-informed principles in service delivery"). Option B (a response reflecting the individual's best attempt to cope with the experiences) aligns with this, as trauma-informed care views behaviors like hypervigilance or dissociation as protective strategies developed in response to trauma, not as inherently problematic.

Option A (culturally specific responses) is too narrow, as trauma responses are not solely cultural. Option C (maladaptive response) contradicts trauma-informed principles by labeling responses as dysfunctional rather than adaptive. Option D (environmentally specific, maladaptive) also mischaracterizes responses as maladaptive and overly ties them to environment alone. The PRA Study Guide, referencing SAMHSA's trauma-informed care principles, emphasizes coping attempts as central to understanding trauma, supporting Option B.

NEW QUESTION # 15

An individual with a psychiatric disability complains that her medication is making her too drowsy, even though it stops the distressing voices she hears. When using self-disclosure, the practitioner should:

- A. Describe a time when he injured his back and had to work closely with his doctor to get the medicine adjusted so that it did not make him dizzy.
- B. Talk about his family's demands upon him and how difficult it is for him to cope.
- C. Share that he always takes his medications exactly as prescribed because he feels that his doctor knows what is best for him.
- D. Talk about the time he stopped taking antibiotics without completing the entire course and then had a recurrence of his infection.

Answer: A

Explanation:

This question falls under Domain I: Interpersonal Competencies, which emphasizes person-centered communication, including the appropriate use of self-disclosure to build therapeutic relationships. The CPRP Exam Blueprint specifies that self-disclosure should be "relevant, purposeful, and aimed at fostering hope, empathy, or collaboration, while maintaining professional boundaries." In this scenario, the individual is struggling with medication side effects (drowsiness), and the practitioner's self-disclosure should relate to this experience to validate her concerns and encourage collaboration with healthcare providers.

* Option A: Describing a personal experience of adjusting medication with a doctor due to side effects (dizziness) is relevant to the individual's situation. It validates her experience, models collaboration with a healthcare provider, and fosters hope that side effects can be managed, aligning with recovery-oriented communication.

* Option B: Discussing stopping antibiotics is unrelated to psychiatric medication or side effects and focuses on non-adherence, which could imply judgment and is not therapeutic in this context.

* Option C: Sharing strict adherence to medication due to trust in a doctor may dismiss the individual's valid concerns about side effects, potentially alienating her and undermining person-centered communication.

* Option D: Talking about family demands is irrelevant to the individual's medication concerns and risks shifting focus to the practitioner's personal issues, violating professional boundaries.

Extract from CPRP Exam Blueprint (Domain I: Interpersonal Competencies):

"Tasks include: 1. Establishing and maintaining a therapeutic relationship with individuals. 2. Using self- disclosure purposefully to foster hope, empathy, or collaboration, while maintaining professional boundaries."
