NEW QUESTION # 42

A threat hunter discovers a true negative event from a zero-day exploit that is using privilege escalation to launch "Malware.pdf.exe".

Which XQL query will always show the correct user context used to launch

"Malware.pdf.exe"?

- A. `config case_sensitive = false | dataset = xdr_data | filter event_type = ENUM.PROCESS | filter action_process_image_name = "Malware.pdf.exe" | fields causality_actor_effective_username`
- B. `config case_sensitive = false | dataset = xdr_data | filter event_type = ENUM.PROCESS | filter action_process_image_name = "Malware.pdf.exe" | fields actor_process_username`
- C. `config case_sensitive = false | dataset = xdr_data | filter event_type = ENUM.PROCESS | filter action_process_image_name = "Malware.pdf.exe" | fields action_process_username`
- D. `config case_sensitive = false | datamodel dataset = xdrdata | filter xdm.source.process.name = "Malware.pdf.exe" | fields xdm.target.user.username`

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is A- the query using the field `causality_actor_effective_username`.

When analyzing events where privilege escalation is used, it is essential to identify the original effective user that initiated the causality chain, not merely the process's own running user (as provided by other fields). The `causality_actor_effective_username` specifically provides the effective username context of the actor behind the entire chain of actions that resulted in launching the suspicious executable.

Explanation of fields from Official Document:

* `causality_actor_effective_username`: This field indicates the original effective user who started the entire causality chain.

* `actor_process_username` and `action_process_username`: These fields indicate the immediate process username, not necessarily reflecting the correct original context when privilege escalation occurs.

Therefore, to always identify the correct user context in privilege escalation scenarios, option A is the verified correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 43

What is the main use of the Playground in Cortex XSIAM?

Response:

- A. Test scripts and integrations in a safe environment
- B. Build dashboards
- C. Manage endpoint policies

NEW QUESTION # 44

A security analyst is reviewing alerts and incidents associated with internal vulnerability scanning performed by the security operations team.

Which built-in incident domain will be assigned to these alerts and incidents in Cortex XSIAM?

- A. Hunting
- B. Health
- C. IT
- D. Security

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is D - IT.

Alerts and incidents related to internal vulnerability scanning and other non-security operational events are categorized under the IT domain in Cortex XSIAM. This allows teams to differentiate between security-related and IT operations-related alerts for better incident management and prioritization.

"Incidents generated from internal IT operations, such as vulnerability scanning, are assigned to the IT domain, separating them from security-focused domains." Document Reference: XSIAM Analyst ILT Lab Guide.pdf Page: Page 28 (Alerting and Detection Processes section)
