NEW QUESTION # 111

Which two objects are required to configure a server policy in reverse proxy mode without content routing? (Choose two.)

- A. Protected hostname
- B. Server pool
- C. Virtual server
- D. Site publishing

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Protected hostname: In reverse proxy mode, the protected hostname refers to the domain or hostname that FortiWeb will protect. It specifies which hostname FortiWeb is acting as a reverse proxy for, and is required for the server policy configuration.

Virtual server: A virtual server is a logical representation of a web server that FortiWeb handles. It's required to configure how traffic is routed to the protected resources in reverse proxy mode.

NEW QUESTION # 112

What are two results of enabling monitor mode on FortiWeb? (Choose two.)

- A. It uses the default action for all profiles and, depending on the configuration, blocks or allows traffic.
- B. It does not affect any HTML rewriting or redirection actions in web protection profiles.
- C. It does not affect denial-of-service (DoS) protection profile actions to rate limit traffic.
- D. It overrides all usual profile actions. FortiWeb accepts all requests and generates alert email or log messages only for violations.

Answer: C,D

It does not affect denial-of-service (DoS) protection profile actions to rate limit traffic: Monitor mode allows FortiWeb to monitor traffic without impacting the protection profile actions, including rate limiting in the DoS protection profiles. Traffic will still be subjected to DoS protection actions like rate limiting, but FortiWeb will not block traffic unless a violation occurs. It overrides all usual profile actions. FortiWeb accepts all requests and generates alert email or log messages only for violations: In monitor mode, FortiWeb will allow all traffic through and generate logs or alerts for any violations, but it will not take active actions like blocking requests or redirecting traffic. This allows you to observe the traffic patterns and potential threats without disrupting normal operations.
