Juniper Enterprise Routing and Switching, Professional (JNCIP-ENT) Sample Questions (Q22-Q27):

NEW QUESTION # 22

You run a multivendor switching environment where you have configured VSTP. You have 450 VLANs and notice that some of your VLANs do not function properly. How should you change the configuration to get all 450 VLANs working?

- A. Set the VLAN max-age to 3600 or more.
- B. Enable RSTP to handle additional VLANs.
- C. Include the force-version stp; statement in your configuration
- D. Increase the bridge priority on all VLANs to at least 16k.

Answer: B

Explanation:

VSTP (VLAN Spanning Tree Protocol) is Juniper's implementation that provides a separate spanning tree instance for each VLAN, ensuring compatibility with Cisco's PVST+. However, it has significant scaling limitations:

* Instance Limits: On many Juniper EX and QFX series switches, VSTP is restricted to a maximum of 253 or 510 VLAN instances depending on the software version (ELS vs. non-ELS). In your scenario, having 450 VLANs exceeds the standard 253-instance limit found on many platforms.

* The Solution (Option B): When the number of VLANs exceeds the VSTP capacity, the recommended best practice is to enable RSTP (Rapid Spanning Tree Protocol). Unlike VSTP, RSTP runs a single spanning tree instance for the entire switch, regardless of how many VLANs are configured. This ensures that all 450 VLANs are protected from loops without hitting the hardware's instance-count limit.

* Other Options: Option A (force-version) only affects the BPDU format for compatibility but doesn't solve the instance limit. Option C and Option D are parameter tuning actions that do not address the architectural limitation of the number of running instances.

- A. Configure flexible VLAN tagging on the user ports with the data and voice VLANs as members
- B. Configure the IP phones to label voice traffic with the DSCP of code point and apply a BA classifier to the access ports to classify voice traffic
- C. Configure VLAN tagging on the IP phones and use the voice VLAN feature on the access ports to assign tagged frames to the voice VLAN and untagged frames to a data VLAN
