CompTIA SecurityX Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q243-Q248):

NEW QUESTION # 243

After a penetration test on the internal network, the following report was generated:

Attack Target Result

Compromised host ADMIN01S.CORP.LOCAL Successful

Hash collected KRBTGT.CORP.LOCAL Successful

Hash collected SQLSV.CORP.LOCAL Successful

Pass the hash SQLSV.CORP.LOCAL Failed

Domain control CORP.LOCAL Successful

Which of the following should be recommended to remediate the attack?

- A. Deleting SQLSV
- B. Resetting the local domain
- C. Rotating KRBTGT password
- D. Reimaging ADMIN01S

Answer: C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation:

The attacker gained domain control by collecting the KRBTGT hash (used for Kerberos tickets). Let's evaluate:

- * A. Deleting SQLSV: Irrelevant since pass-the-hash failed there.
- * B. Reimaging ADMIN01S: Addresses the compromised host but not domain control.
- * C. Rotating KRBTGT password: Invalidates stolen Kerberos tickets, mitigating domain control per CAS-005's focus on identity security.

NEW QUESTION # 244

An application requires the storage of PII. A systems engineer needs to implement a solution that uses an external device for key management. Which of the following is the best solution?

- A. HSM
- B. TPM
- C. SBoM
- D. vTPM

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 245

A company detects suspicious activity associated with external connections. Security detection tools are unable to categorize this activity. Which of the following is the best solution to help the company overcome this challenge?

- A. Implement an Interactive honeypot
- B. Map network traffic to known IoCs.
- C. Monitor the dark web
- D. implement UEBA

Answer: D

Explanation:

User and Entity Behavior Analytics (UEBA) is the best solution to help the company overcome challenges associated with suspicious activity that cannot be categorized by traditional detection tools. UEBA uses advanced analytics to establish baselines of normal behavior for users and entities within the network. It then identifies deviations from these baselines, which may indicate malicious activity. This approach is particularly effective for detecting unknown threats and sophisticated attacks that do not match known indicators of compromise (IoCs).

NEW QUESTION # 246

During a forensic review of a cybersecurity incident, a security engineer collected a portion of the payload used by an attacker on a compromised web server. Given the following portion of the code:

Which of the following best describes this incident?

- A. Stored XSS
- B. SQL injection
- C. XSRF attack
- D. Command injection

Answer: A

Explanation:

The provided code snippet shows a script that captures the user's cookies and sends them to a remote server.

This type of attack is characteristic of Cross-Site Scripting (XSS), specifically stored XSS, where the malicious script is stored on the target server (e.g., in a database) and executed in the context of users who visit the infected web page.

* A. XSRF (Cross-Site Request Forgery) attack: This involves tricking the user into performing actions on a different site without their knowledge but does not involve stealing cookies via script injection.

* B. Command injection: This involves executing arbitrary commands on the host operating system, which is not relevant to the given JavaScript code.

* C. Stored XSS: The provided code snippet matches the pattern of a stored XSS attack, where the script is injected into a web page, and when users visit the page, the script executes and sends the user's cookies to the attacker's server.

* D. SQL injection: This involves injecting malicious SQL queries into the database and is unrelated to the given JavaScript code.
