A colleague tells you that when they open the Microsoft 365 Copilot app, they have access to the Researcher agent. You need to access to the Researcher agent. What should you do?

- A. From Microsoft Edge, use your work account to sign in to <https://copilot.microsoft.com>.
- B. Select Explore agents and then search for Researcher.
- C. Sign in to the Copilot app by using a personal account.
- D. Request a Microsoft 365 Copilot license from an administrator.

Answer: D

Explanation:

In the Microsoft 365 Copilot app, the Researcher agent is a specialized "reasoning agent" designed for deep, multi-step analysis rather than quick chat responses.

How to Access Researcher

1. Open the App: Sign into the Microsoft 365 Copilot app or open it from your Windows taskbar.
2. Locate Agents: In the left-hand navigation pane, look for the Agents section.
3. Select Researcher:
  - 3a. If it is already listed, simply click Researcher to open the dedicated interface. [It is not listed here]
  - 3b. If you don't see it, click All agents to open the Agent Store, then search for "Researcher" under the "Built by Microsoft" or "Productivity" categories.
4. Pin for Easy Access: Hover over the Researcher agent in the list, select the More (...) menu, and choose to pin it so it stays visible in your sidebar.

Requirements for Access

*-> License: You must have a Microsoft 365 Copilot license. It is available for Business, Enterprise, and Premium subscribers.

Admin Enablement: If you still cannot find the agent, your IT administrator may need to enable it.

They can do this in the Microsoft 365 admin center by navigating to Copilot > Settings > Data access > Agents and ensuring access is set to "All Users" Reference:

NEW QUESTION # 65

You receive several images from a colleague.

You suspect that the images were generated by using Microsoft 365 Copilot.

What can you use to verify whether the images were AI-generated?

- A. content credentials
- B. watermarks

- C. file descriptions
- D. file names

Answer: A

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed 150 to 200 words of Explanation Microsoft AI Business professional documents:

Microsoft's approach to transparency for AI-generated media relies on provenance signals rather than cosmetic indicators. File names and descriptions can be edited easily and are not reliable evidence of how an image was created. Watermarks may appear in some contexts, but they are not consistently applied across all AI image-generation workflows and can sometimes be removed or lost through copying, screenshotting, or file conversion.

Microsoft supports the use of content credentials to help users verify whether digital content was created or modified with AI.

Content credentials are part of a provenance standard (often associated with C2PA) that can embed tamper-evident metadata into media files. When present, these credentials can show information about the tool or process used to generate or edit the image, providing a verifiable chain of origin.

Therefore, the most dependable way to verify whether the images were AI-generated is to check for content credentials (option C), since they are designed specifically to provide authenticity and provenance information for AI-created or AI-edited content.
