Confluent Certified Developer for Apache Kafka Certification Examination Sample Questions (Q32-Q37):

NEW QUESTION # 32

Match the testing tool with the type of test it is typically used to perform

Answer:

Explanation:

□

Explanation:

Unit Testing # MockProducer

Integration Testing # Testcontainers

Performance Testing # Trogdor

Mock Data Generation # Connect Datagen

MockProducer: Simulates a Kafka producer in unit tests (no real broker interaction).

Testcontainers: Spawns Kafka in Docker for real environment testing.

Trogdor: Kafka's built-in performance load testing framework.

Connect Datagen: Creates sample source records for test and demo purposes.

From Kafka Developer Tools Guide:

"Kafka developers commonly use MockProducer for unit tests, Testcontainers for integration, and Trogdor for performance tests."

NEW QUESTION # 33

We want the average of all events in every five-minute window updated every minute. What kind of Kafka Streams window will be required on the stream?

- A. Session window
- B. Tumbling window
- C. Sliding window
- D. Hopping window

Answer: D

Explanation:

A hopping window is defined by two properties: the window's size and its advance interval (aka "hop"), e.g., a hopping window with a size 5 minutes and an advance interval of 1 minute.

NEW QUESTION # 34

Match the topic configuration setting with the reason the setting affects topic durability.

(You are given settings like unclean.leader.election.enable=false, replication.factor, min.insync.replicas=2)

Answer:

Explanation:

* unclean.leader.election.enable=false# Prevents data loss by only considering in-sync replicas when rebalancing.

* replication.factor# Specifies how many redundant copies of partitions are distributed across brokers.

* min.insync.replicas=2# Sets the standard for the number of partition instances that must keep up with the latest committed message.

* unclean.leader.election.enable=false ensures that only in-sync replicas can be elected as leaders. If disabled, an out-of-sync replica may become leader, potentially leading to data loss.

* replication.factor defines how many brokers will maintain copies of each partition, directly impacting durability and availability.

* min.insync.replicas determines how many replicas must acknowledge a write when acks=all is used, enforcing write durability.

Reference: Apache Kafka Topic Configuration Documentation

NEW QUESTION # 35

You need to explain the best reason to implement the consumer callback interface ConsumerRebalanceListener prior to a Consumer Group Rebalance.

Which statement is correct?

- A. Offsets are compacted.
- B. Partitions assigned to a consumer may change.
- C. Partition leaders may change.
- D. Previous log files are deleted.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The ConsumerRebalanceListener lets you handle partition assignments and revocations during rebalances.

This is critical for managing offsets, stateful processing, or external transactions.

From Kafka Consumer Rebalance Docs:

"Implementing ConsumerRebalanceListener allows your application to take action before and after partitions are reassigned."

* A is true: It lets your app react when partitions assigned to the consumer change.

* B, C, and D are unrelated to consumer rebalancing directly.

Reference: Kafka Consumer JavaDocs > ConsumerRebalanceListener

NEW QUESTION # 36

You are creating a Kafka Streams application to process retail data.

Match the input data streams with the appropriate Kafka Streams object.

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

* Table# Product, Customers

* Stream# Orders_Placed, Shipment_Of_Orders

* Tables represent slowly changing reference data- e.g., customer profiles, product info.

* Streams represent real-time event data- e.g., orders placed, shipments processed.

From Kafka Streams Documentation:

"Use KTable for reference datasets, and KStream for event-based processing such as orders or logs." Reference: Kafka Streams API Concepts
