問題 #112

What is the primary consideration when designing identity relationships for modeling in Adobe RT- CDP?

- A. Disable deterministic identity resolution.
- B. Ensure all identities are linked to a primary namespace.
- C. Avoid using secondary identity relationships.

- D. Use one-to-one relationships exclusively.

答案： B

問題 #113

A data engineer has loaded a single order event with a status of "order_placed" into the Real-Time Customer Profile. The event utilizes an Experience Event class-based schema/dataset where the email address is marked as the primary identity.

The event is as follows:

_id: 1234 (unique id of the event)

timestamp: 2023-10-06T12:00:00Z (timestamp the event occurred)

Email: john.smith@somedomain.com (primary identity -- who the event belongs to)

status: order_placed (status of the event)

A few hours later the data engineer sends an updated order event into the Real-Time Customer Profile stating the order status is now "order_shipped".

The event is as follows:

_id: 1234

timestamp: 2023-10-06T14:00:00Z

Email: john.smith@somedomain.com

status: order_shipped

When the data engineer looks up the profile, the new event does not appear with the "order_shipped" status on the profile, but it is in the Data Lake.

Why did this happen?

- A. The Real-Time Customer Profile skipped the record as the _id was already existing.
- B. The Real-Time Customer Profile skipped the record as the timestamp was different.
- C. The Real-Time Customer Profile had a processing error during ingestion.
- D. The Real-Time Customer Profile only accepts one event per timestamp per primary identity.

答案： A
