IBM MQ v9.4 Administrator - Professional Sample Questions (Q301-Q306):

NEW QUESTION # 301

Which IBM MQ component is responsible for enabling communication between different queue managers by routing messages securely over the network, allowing interoperability between different platforms and MQ versions?

- A. Message channel agent (MCA)
- B. Application program interface
- C. Transaction manager
- D. Queue manager control agent

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Message Channel Agent (MCA) handles message routing between queue managers, providing secure and reliable communication.

NEW QUESTION # 302

In IBM MQ, when multiple distributed applications exchange critical business information across unreliable networks, which mechanism guarantees that messages will not only be delivered in the correct order but also without duplication, even if retransmissions occur due to failures?

- A. Channel retry policies with unlimited attempts
- B. Sequence number tracking combined with acknowledgment protocols
- C. Dead letter queue forwarding as a standard delivery mechanism
- D. Queue depth monitoring with automatic cleanup

Answer: B

Explanation:

IBM MQ ensures reliable once-only delivery by using sequence numbers and acknowledgments across channels, preventing duplication and preserving message order during retries.

NEW QUESTION # 303

IBM MQ provides various options for ensuring message order during processing. Which of the following approaches correctly guarantees that messages sent by a producer are received and processed by the consumer in the exact order they were sent?

- A. Using a single persistent queue with a single consumer to process messages sequentially
- B. Using multiple non-persistent queues and letting consumers process messages concurrently
- C. Using cluster queues and round-robin distribution
- D. Sending messages to temporary dynamic queues with multiple consumers

Answer: A

Explanation:

A single persistent queue with one consumer ensures strict message order, as messages are stored persistently and processed sequentially, preventing reordering.

NEW QUESTION # 304

How does IBM MQ ensure atomic processing of messages when multiple messages are sent and consumed within a single transaction, so that either all operations succeed together or none are committed, avoiding partial updates in case of application failure or system crash?

- A. By using syncpoint-controlled PUT and GET operations
- B. By using message groups without transactional support
- C. By replicating messages to multiple queues without commit control
- D. By sending all messages as non-persistent without acknowledgment

Answer: A

Explanation:

Syncpoint in IBM MQ ensures transactional integrity by committing all operations in a transaction together or rolling back entirely, preventing partial updates or message loss.

NEW QUESTION # 305

When an IBM MQ message cannot be delivered to its intended target queue due to misconfiguration, full queues, or unavailable queue managers, which component captures these undelivered messages and provides administrators with the ability to inspect, troubleshoot, and redirect them appropriately?

- A. Backout queue for retry
- B. Temporary queue deletion mechanism
- C. Dead-letter queue (DLQ)
- D. Alias queue forwarding

Answer: C

Explanation:

The Dead-letter queue (DLQ) stores undelivered messages, allowing administrators to investigate failures, correct issues, and safely re-route messages, ensuring no data loss.
