Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:
A Zero-day vulnerability refers to a security flaw in software or hardware that is unknown to the vendor or has not yet been patched. If this vulnerability is exploited before the vendor has issued a fix or patch, it becomes a Zero-day exploit. These attacks are highly dangerous because they take advantage of the absence of defenses due to the lack of awareness or mitigation options.
A: Spoofing is a form of impersonation, not necessarily tied to unpatched vulnerabilities.
B: Brute-force attacks rely on repeatedly guessing credentials and are not related to software flaws.
C: DoS (Denial of Service) attacks are meant to overwhelm systems and don't necessarily exploit unknown vulnerabilities.

NEW QUESTION # 54
Thousands of compromised machines are attempting to make fake purchases from an online store. Which of the following is taking place?

- A. Brute-force attack
- B. SQL injection
- C. Spoofing
- D. DDoS

Answer: D

Explanation:
The correct answer is C. DDoS (Distributed Denial-of-Service), because the attack involves thousands of compromised machines, commonly referred to as a botnet, generating fraudulent traffic against an online service. Although the activity includes fake purchases, the scale and distributed nature indicate an attempt to overwhelm or disrupt the service.
According to the Quentin Docter - CompTIA A+ Complete Study Guide, DDoS attacks use multiple systems to flood a target with traffic, exhausting server resources and preventing legitimate users from accessing the service. These attacks often involve compromised devices controlled remotely.
The Travis Everett & Andrew Hutz - All-in-One Exam Guide explains that DDoS attacks can take many forms, including HTTP request floods and application-layer attacks that mimic legitimate user actions, such as fake transactions.
The Mike Meyers / Mark Soper Lab Manual clarifies that brute-force attacks focus on credential guessing, spoofing involves identity falsification, and SQL injection targets database queries. None of those specifically require thousands of compromised machines.
Because the defining characteristics here are scale, distribution, and coordinated malicious activity, the correct classification is a DDoS attack, making C the correct answer.
