IIA Practice of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q48-Q53):

NEW QUESTION # 48

Which of the following methodologies consists of the internal auditor holding individual meetings with different people, asking them the same questions, and aggregating the results?

- A. Facilitated workshops.
- B. Structured interviews.
- C. Surveys.
- D. Elicitation.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Structured interviews involve the internal auditor holding individual meetings with different people, asking them the same set of questions, and then aggregating the results. This method ensures consistency in the information gathered across multiple respondents, allowing for an effective comparison and analysis of the data collected.

IIA References:

* IIA Standard 2310: Identifying Information suggests that information gathered during an audit must be reliable and relevant.

Structured interviews help achieve this by ensuring that each interviewee is asked the same questions, thus providing comparable data across the board.

* The Practice Guide on Interviewing Techniques emphasizes the use of structured interviews for consistency and comprehensiveness in data collection.

NEW QUESTION # 49

A chief audit executive assigns a team of three internal auditors to carry out an audit engagement to ascertain adherence to the requirements of the procurement policy. Which of the following should be included in the scope of this engagement?

- A. The inherent risks to be considered
- B. The sample size to be considered

- C. The audit procedures to be considered
- D. The sub-processes to be considered

Answer: D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation:

The scope of an engagement defines the boundaries of the audit - what areas, functions, activities, or processes will be reviewed. In this case, the engagement's purpose is to test adherence to the procurement policy, so the sub-processes (D) within procurement (e.g., vendor selection, purchase approvals, invoice processing) should be clearly defined in scope.

* Sample size (A) and procedures (C) are part of the audit work program, not scope.

* Inherent risks (B) are identified during planning but do not define scope boundaries.

Therefore, Option D is correct: defining sub-processes ensures that the audit scope is comprehensive and appropriately focused on procurement policy adherence.
