NEW QUESTION # 53

Which service does an Intrusion Detection System (IDS) provide?

- A. It detects attempts to break into or misuse a computer system.
- B. It is the lock on the door for networks and computer systems.
- C. It blocks malicious activity in networks and computer systems.
- D. It is effective against all vulnerabilities in networks and computer systems.

Answer: A

Explanation:

An Intrusion Detection System (IDS) is a passive monitoring tool that detects unauthorized or malicious activity in networked systems. It does not block traffic (like an IPS), but rather alerts administrators to potential breaches.

"An IDS monitors network or system activities for malicious actions or policy violations and produces alerts or logs for analysis."

- ISA/IEC 62443-3-3:2013, SR 3.2 - Detection of Security Events

It's a core component of security monitoring and response - often paired with an Incident Response Plan (IRP) as defined in ISA/IEC 62443-2-1.

Clarification of Options:

Option A is metaphorical and not technically accurate.

Option B is false; IDS does not protect against all vulnerabilities.

Option C is incorrect; IDS does not block, only detects.

Option D is correct - it detects unauthorized access or misuse.

NEW QUESTION # 54

What port number is used by MODBUS TCP/IP for communication?

- A. 0

- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: C

Explanation:

MODBUS TCP/IP, a widely used communication protocol in industrial control systems, uses TCP port 502 by default.

"Modbus TCP/IP operates on TCP port 502, and this port should be monitored and protected to prevent unauthorized commands to critical control systems."

- ISA/IEC 62443-3-3:2013, Annex A - Communication Protocols

This makes port 502 a high-value target for attackers, which is why it must be secured via firewalls and access control.
