PMI Agile Certified Practitioner Sample Questions (Q350-Q355):

NEW QUESTION # 350

Product Backlog Items (PBI) described as emergent, are expected to:

- A. Become new technology requirements
- B. Grow and change over time as users' stories are completed
- C. Be the most recent stories added to the backlog
- D. Become the highest priority items

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 351

An agile team often fails to deliver its sprint goal. At a sprint retrospective, the more experienced team members complain that the less experienced team members are working too slowly. This creates tension in the team.

What should the scrum master do to remove this tension?

- A. Have an individual meeting with the experienced team members and ask them to be more empathic when the less experienced members fail to deliver.
- C Remind the team that they are jointly responsible for their deliverables and should consider the different competency levels when agreeing to sprint goals
- B. Initiate a meeting with the team and ask them to decompose the product backlog items further so they become clearer and easier to deliver on time.
- C. Ask human resources for a training budget so the less experienced team members can increase their skill level and work more efficiently.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Scrum Master should remind the team that in Agile, the entire team is responsible for delivering the sprint goal, and it is important to take into account the different skill levels of team members when setting goals. This approach promotes a collaborative and supportive environment where experienced members can mentor less experienced ones, helping to improve the team's overall performance. It also encourages more realistic and achievable sprint goals, fostering empathy and understanding within the team. By acknowledging competency differences, the team can better allocate work and support each other to meet their goals.

NEW QUESTION # 352

During refinement, the team tester has a question about part of the acceptance criteria for a given user story.

Who should clarify the acceptance criteria?

- A. The developer, since they write the code that would be tested.
- B. The scrum master, since they coordinate with the team and define the acceptance criteria.
- C. The sponsor, since they understand the business value.
- D. The product owner, since their vision is the basis for the acceptance criteria.

Answer: D
